French Reds And Rightists Battle Again In Assembly

Fist-Fighting Over Antisabotage Bill Comes as Transport Workers Set Strike

Paris, March 5 (U.P.).—Fist-swinging Communist deputies fought a free-for-all brawl with rightists in the National Assembly today over the government's antistrike legislation as the nation's serious strike wave spread to the Paris public transport system.

More than 30,000 Parisian transport workers voted to walk out Monday in a strike of unlimited duration that was expected to paralyze the city's bus and subway system.

The government was preparing emergency facilities and was reported ready to seize buses and man them with troops if necessary.

The strike was called for 5 a. m. Monday (11 p. m. EST Sunday).

The Assembly scuffle came during the Communists' marathon filibuster against the antisabotage measure. Forty fist-swinging Communist deputies charged rightwing benches through lines of Assembly guards.

The Communist attack broke out when Communist Deputy Antoine Gros leaped over his bench and made for Rightist Deputy Alfred Coste-Floret.

Coste-Floret had just shouted across the Assembly hall at Gros, "Shut up, you common criminal."

Many of the deputies emerged from the scrap with their clothes torn but no one was injured. A Socialist deputy finally sounded the sirens to evacuate the chamber and the session was suspended until tempers cooled.

The fighting, reminiscent of Friday night's Assembly rioting, broke out as cat-calling Communist deputies stepped up their attacks against a government bill providing stiff penalties for any saboteurs of United States arms aid to France.

The Communists, who have threatened to block the shipments, have kept the Assembly in an uproar for three days with their filibustering tactics against the bill, which empowers the government to mete out jail terms to offenders.

FBI Helps British Hunt for Fuchs Atom Spy Links

London, (Monday), March 6 (U.P.). Britain's security services, aided by FBI men from the United States, spent the weekend in one of the greatest spy hunts on record, seeking the links in an atomic-secret pipeline to Russia, it was reported today.

The War Office MI-5 counter-intelligence service, special branch of Scotland Yard, the Special Service Bureau of the Foreign Office and the Special Investigation Branch of the Supply Department participated in the hunt.

The operatives are understood to be tracing a small, highly organized group of Russian spy agents who forwarded to Moscow atomic secrets supplied by Dr. Klaus Fuchs—and possibly others.

The security services are said to have found the channel through which the information was sent out of the country.

Agents were detailed to try to hunt down a woman with whom Fuchs spent two days at the Thames River resort of Maidenhead, January 16 and 17—15 days before his arrest as a spy.

The Daily Herald, newspaper of the Labor Party, reported Sir Percy Sillitoe, chief of MI-5, might fly to Washington to consult J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, on the spy hunt.

Leaders of two rightist parties in Greek election

Athens, Greece, Monday, March 6 (AP). — Left-wing candidates scored surprising gains in early returns from Greece's general elections yesterday.

In ballotting from which violence reportedly was completely absent, the two left-wing parties—the National Progressive Union and the Republican Front — won more than 30 percent of the votes in nearly 18 percent of Greece's precincts which were first to make returns.

The two major right wing and centrist parties—Constantin Tsaldaris' Populists (Royalists) and the liberals of Sophocles Venizelos—together trailed some 5000 votes behind the combined tally for the left-wing parties.

The rest of the vote was split among 22 other center and rightest parties.

John Sophianopoulos leads the Republican Front; the National Progressive Union is headed by Gen. Nicholas Plastiras and Emanuel Tsouderos.

The Liberals were expected in most preelection forecasts to lead in the contest. But the Social

Tito Denies Seeking Amity With Moscow

Premier Declares Talks Impossible Without Apologies

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 5 (AP).—Premier Marshal Tito today denied foreign reports that Yugoslavia has proposed a compromise in her dispute with the Russian-led Cominform.

He spoke in the Adriatic seaport of Split before a crowd officially estimated at 80,000. It was the Premier's second major address in Yugoslavia's current election campaign. His ticket is unopposed in the country's first postwar election, to be held March 26.

(Former King Peter of Yugoslavia said a week ago in Paris that Tito has "practically returned to the group of Moscow satellites." Peter commented on Yugoslavia's recognition of the anti-French Viet NAM regime in Indo-China headed by Moscow-trained Ho Chi-minh. The former monarch also said he had received private information from his homeland that Stalin and Tito were getting together again.)

Tito denied that Yugoslavia has been discussing with Moscow the possibility of a compromise of the dispute that has been going on since the Cominform denounced him in June, 1948.

"We did not provoke a quarrel with anyone," he said. "We want to live in peace with everyone. If someone wants talks, I do not appeal for them, but I think that we will not take the initiative. We are so much slandered and dirtied that those who did it must first excuse themselves before the talks begin."

(All through the quarrel with the Cominform countries, Tito has insisted that he has stayed on the road of "true communism." He has also insisted that Yugoslavia wants only an equal voice with the other countries within the Communist family. Moscow has denounced him as a Communist heretic and said he has pursued strictly nationalist policies.)

Tito said: "We have the Communistic courage to say to all of them (his enemies), including those of the Bolshevik Party, that they are not right. We have the courage to say that they lie and that their lies are unworthy of a Communist. They are not going to shatter us, nor are they going to force us to our knees."

Davis Presses All-Out Probe Of Gambling

Chairman Will Push Request for $40,000 To Make Full Inquiry

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Chairman James C. Davis of the House Crime Subcommittee last night again promised a full-scale investigation into gambling in Washington.

Calling the subcommittee's present gambling probe "superficial," Representative Davis (D., Ga.) said he "definitely" will press for the $40,000 he has asked the House to grant.

Davis made a formal resolution for the money late last month—before the committee conducted hearings into Maj. Robert J. Barrett's transfer of Capt. Anthony Richitt for "disciplinary reasons."

Of the Barrett-Richitt sessions, Davis said the "committee is through with that. We have heard all the witnesses who wanted to be heard."

The committee, he said, will publish no conclusions on this phase—or any phase—of its hearings until its investigations are completed.

Man and a Boy Rob Storekeeper, Wife of $44

An unusual criminal team—a man and a small boy—held up a Northeast food store last night and robbed the proprietor and his wife of $444.

Essa A. Badran, operator of the Big Star Market, 641 15th st. ne., said the pair entered his store at about 6:45 p. m. The man had a small caliber revolver.

Badran told police he and his wife, Saleemex, were forced at gun point to the rear of the store, their living quarters. There the man took $361 from Badran's wallet, while the boy rifled the cash register of $83.

The bandits locked the Badrans in their rooms and fled, Badran said.

The man was described as white, 35 to 40, dressed in dark trousers and a brown mackinaw-type coat. Only description of the boy was that he was about 12 years old.

Nine Seized in Virginia Raids For Liquor Sales or Purchase

Nine men were arrested for violation of the Virginia ABC laws in a series of raids in Alexandria and Manassas yesterday and Friday.

The arrests were made as the result of the work of an undercover agent from Richmond, G. P. Smethie, who made "buys" from those later arrested by a raiding squad made up of ABC Agent M. K. Bryant of northern Virginia, Detective Robert Jones and Policeman Charles Baber, both of the Alexandria police and Virginia State Trooper P. P. Herndon at Manassas.

Three men were arrested as the result of a raid on Ted's Newsstand, 421 Hume ave., Alexandria. They were: Nicholas J. Lafaragiola, 35, 115 Hume ave., two charges of selling liquor without a license in violation of Section 40 of the ABC Act; Charles G. Harmon, 46, 100 E. Howell ave., Alexandria, two sales in violation of Section 40, and Theodore Knott, 36, 313 Delray ave., owner of the newsstand, one charge of violation of Section 40. Agent Bryant said Lafaragiola is at liberty on a suspended jail sentence imposed last June in a similar case.

James Clifton Mathews, 21, was charged with two sales in violation of Section 40 at Beach's Potomac Esso station, 2300 Jefferson Davis hwy. Bryant said he also was a previous offender.

Jet Bomber Curtailment Considered

Air Force Studies Shelving of XB-52 To Increase Orders Of Altered B-36

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force is considering a major modification of its heavy-bomber program.

Reliable industry sources said yesterday that serious study is being given to the abandonment or postponement of development of the long-range Boeing XB-52 jet bomber—scheduled successor to the Convair B-36 as the backbone of America's Strategic Air Force—in favor of large additional orders of a greatly altered B-36.

Under the plan—still in the exploratory stage—new "turbo-prop" engines, now under development, would replace the B-36's six piston engines. And a new swept-back wing, somewhat like that now on Boeing's medium range B-47 jet bomber and the newer jet fighters, would be installed in place of the B-36's present conventional wing.

Many Factors Weighed

Many factors will influence the final decision. Foremost among them are the success of the new engine and the feasibility of the proposed wing change. The modified B-36 would have to achieve a speed of 500 miles an hour and a ceiling of 50,000 feet, with a range of something like 10,000 miles to be acceptable, it is said. That compares with a speed of more than 350 mph and a ceiling over 40,000 feet for the present B-36 with jet emergency speed.

But defense chiefs have high hopes of the new Pratt & Whitney turbo-prop engine, which uses jet power to turn conventional propellers. Pratt & Whitney engineers have developed the new engine in conjunction with the Navy, which wants both maximum range and top speed within the weight and size limitations imposed by aircraft carrier use.

It is reported that a recent Navy engineering study, confirmed by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, indicates the turbo-prop engine will exceed its promised performance and combine something like the range of conventional piston engines with speed approaching that of jets.

There were indications that Convair engineers already are at work on the proposed new B-36 wing.

Two factors are behind the move to see if the B-36 can be modified for greatly improved performance. One is a prospect that the B-52 may not have the range for an intercontinental bomber. It still is in the design stage and is not expected to be flying for a couple of years.

Perhaps more important is the question of cost and available appropriations. Cost of the first 170 B-36's has been officially estimated at $1,022,000,000. Though not yet announced, 47 more are being ordered from 1950 funds.

Approved plans call for six groups of B-36's—four bomb and two reconnaissance. That is 180 planes, without spares. Officials said last week that the fourth bomb group will be in process of completion — conversion from B-29's—by the summer of 1951.

Air Force officials have testified that they now can buy B-36's for about $4,700,000 apiece—as compared with about six million dollars for the first 170.

On the other hand, estimates of

One Proposal Vetoed

Road Planners at Loggerheads Over Rock Creek Park Freeway

(Second of a series)

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

National and Maryland planners are at loggerheads over the one major proposal to break the traffic logjam for thousands of Metropolitan Washington area residents who live near the District line and over it in Montgomery County.

Maryland wants a Rock Creek Freeway to run from downtown all the way to the District line, with twin connections into the park areas in Montgomery County.

But the National Capital Park and Planning Commission so far has agreed only on extension of the present parkway (Constitution ave. to Connecticut ave.) as far as a point past the Zoo, where it could connect with Colorado ave. and 16th st. It vetoed the rest of the proposal some years ago and, despite recent negotiations, the veto is still in force. Behind the disagreement are two points of conflict.

One is a feeling that Rock Creek Park should be primarily a park and not a route for through highways, regardless of the fact that modern parkway construction can go far to eliminate danger even to small children in the park.

The other is the natural feeling in both the District and Maryland that each must look after its own people first. Maryland talks of gas tax revenue lost when motorists buy in the District. The District talks of real estate tax revenue lost when expressways provide easy access to new Maryland homes of those who have fled the crowded city.

The real question is whether area-wide highway planning and construction will make it easier to move about in pursuit of work and play, or whether motorists must struggle through city streets. The Rock Creek Freeway is designed to break the present jam and provide for future growth in the suburbs.

District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young estimates that to extend the present Rock Creek Parkway to Colorado ave. would cost around two million dollars.

To extend it from Colorado ave. to the District line would cost another four million dollars. Maryland planners say a couple million more would be needed to build two spur lines, making use of Rock

Operations Are Already Under Way

Full Production Not Expected Until Wednesday Due To Formal Voting

Pittsburgh, March 5 (AP).—The Nation's striking coal miners started back to work tonight, 6 hours after John L. Lewis signed his victorious contract.

Production crews began to work at several mines in northern West Virginia fields.

So did a crew at a Pennsylvania mine.

The crews were only slightly below normal.

The seven West Virginia mines have a total working force of 2400 men.

C. A. Hughes & Co. near Johnstown, Pa., reported its overnight complement showed up full strength. Its total working force is 200.

The miners' new and joyous chant—"Let's dig coal" replaced the bitter "no-contract, no-work" cry of the United Mine Workers.

Broke but victorious, the diggers sighed with relief as they got word their John L. Lewis had done it again—signed a new contract with a pay boost.

Maintenance men hurried into the pits to ready them for immediate operation.

The United Mine Workers went all out in their efforts to get the men back in the pits quickly.

They acted after Lewis dispatched his back-to-work orders.

Usually the diggers formally vote before returning to work.

But in some coal fields another tradition appears to be on the way out.

Some of the miners say they would work Monday just on direct orders from Lewis' lieutenants that the contract has been signed.

Order Being Broadcast

Radio broadcasts are being used in the big coal producing States of West Virginia and Pennsylvania to order the men back.

There's no question that thousands of diggers will be on the job Monday to speed coal to a fuel-hungry Nation.

And all of them will be in the pits on Tuesday.

Officials of scattered UMW locals in western Pennsylvania said work will not be resumed until Lewis' stop-strike telegram is received and union meetings held. Lewis dispatched the order at the 5:30 p. m. contract-signing.

Many miners live far from the pits, UMW officers said, and cannot be called together before Monday.

Said John Ozanich, president of UMW's biggest local at Robena, Pa.:

"We'll probably go to work Tuesday."

An industry official who declined to be named agreed with predictions of a delay in resuming production. He said:

"Our mines will be ready for work. But I'm certain we won't get anybody in them before Monday night or Tuesday."

Joe Leverotti, president of the 400-man UMW unit at Bridgeville, said:

"My men definitely will not go back Monday morning. It may even be Wednesday before we can get them all back."

Mixed with the elation which surged through the ramshackle mining towns was occasional bitterness born of the long idleness and loss of wages.

49 Municipalities Ask $101,900,736 For Better Housing

Two hundred and seventy-five cities in the United States already have indicated desire to join the national slum clearance program adopted by Congress last July.

Nathaniel S. Keith, director of the Division of Slum Clearance and Urban Redevelopment, Housing and Home Finance Agency, told The Washington Post the cities' response to the slum clearance program indicates not only that it will be successful but that it will probably progress at a rate of speed beyond expectations.

The cities which have already in one way or another shown a desire to join with the Federal Government in a slum removal and redevelopment program range in population from 5000 to more than one million.

Mark Lansburgh, chairman of the D. C. Redevelopment Land Agency, revealed that a request

Janitor's Tools Used in $1000 Safe-Cracking

Enterprising thieves used a building superintendent's tools to pry open a safe containing about $1000 last night after taking it from the fifth floor to the basement in the building elevator.

Edward Mitchell, superintendent at the McGill Building, 908 G st. nw., told police he noticed the broken 500 pound safe in the basement at about 11 p.m. last night. Hammers and chisels from his tool chest were used to open the safe, he told police.

The safe, property of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., was in the office of Wilber B. Tubbs, the company's auditor of disbursements. Entry to the building was made by breaking open the basement door.

Six Eastern High School students driving home from a party were injured early yesterday when their auto smashed into a stone marker at the intersection of U. S. 1 and the Pentagon road network. The car was virtually demolished.

Most seriously injured of the six was Francis Dyer, 17, of 3128 63d ave., Cheverly, Md., who was admitted to Bolling Air Force Base Hospital with a fractured left ankle. The other five were treated and released at Emergency Hospital.

Driver of the car, Darwin D. Hughes, 18, of 1214 19th st. ne., was cut on the forehead and about both eyes.

Others in the car and their injuries were Jonny Bushby, 17, of 1620 Massachusetts ave. se., mild head injuries; Ruth Keithley, 17, of 735 13th st. se., cuts on the left hip and a sprained ankle; Pat Nugent, 17, of 237 8th st. se., bruised left eye and abrasions; Sam Habid, 16, of 231 Massachusetts ave. nw., cuts on the lip.

Hughes told police he was going north on Route 1 shortly after 1 a. m. when his lights went out at the intersection of the 1000 block of Jefferson Davis hwy. He said the car, traveling 40 mph, jumped a curb on a center island and struck a marker in its center.

Price Support Collapse Seen On Perishables

Brannan Says Program Encourages Top Output And Underconsumption

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan has served notice that the present price-support program will "not work for long" for perishables.

Brannan's assertion was made in his annual report, released yesterday. He declared that experience has demonstrated that the present farm program encourages "overproduction on the one hand, and underconsumption on the other."

As expected, the farm chief again recommended production payments for perishable crops. These are an important part of the so-called Brannan Plan. Such payments were permitted under the Agricultural Act of 1948, sometimes called the Aiken law, passed by the Republican Eightieth Congress. They were repealed by the Agricultural Act of 1949, otherwise called the Anderson law.

He said the "fundamental trouble" with the price-supports machinery for perishables and semiperishables was very simple.

Alternatives Listed

Once the Government acquires those commodities, he said, it faces a series of harsh alternatives. It must either, he said:

1. Convert the excess production into storable form.
2. Move the commodities into export outlets at reduced prices.
3. Divert them to nonfood use.
4. Destroy them.

"To find sufficiently new uses for the surpluses," he said, "or to divert them into noncommercial channels at anything comparable to the support price is usually impossible.

"Even on a scale relatively small, such as we have seen with potatoes and a few other commodities, the direct purchase or loan procedure presents difficulties. On a big scale for the perishables and livestock it would not work for long."

However, Brannan declared that until "a better method is developed" price supports must be retained.

"During wartime, price support programs were instrumental in boosting food supplies to record

Lewis Calls Men Minute New Contract Is Signed

Agreement Adds 70c to Daily Pay, 10c for Welfare And Runs 2½ Years

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Mine workers and soft coal operators yesterday signed a new working agreement, ending nine months of bare-knuckle bargaining and promising immediate resumption of coal production.

As United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis and operator representatives put their signatures to the 2½-year contract, predictions were made that work in some mines would begin with the midnight shift last night. General production of soft coal, urgently needed to fill empty bins throughout the country, was expected this morning.

Wires Coal Fields

Promptly after the new agreement was signed at 5:40 p. m. in the Federal Room of the Hotel Statler, Lewis ordered his 370,000 soft coal miners back to work. His order, telegraphed to the coal fields and not expected to meet with dissent, read:

"The new bituminous contract has been approved by the policy committee and executed by the bituminous coal operators. All mines will resume work."

Negotiation of the contract should bring to an end the Nation-wide three-week wildcat strike of soft coal miners. The strike itself climaxed months of three-day work weeks which gradually brought coal stocks down to the point where they were quickly exhausted by the strike. A Government effort to end the strike by invoking the Taft-Hartley Act failed when Judge Richmond B. Keech ruled in District Court here that the Government had not proved its case.

Raise Is 70 Cents a Day

Yesterday's agreement, which brought to an end protracted day and night negotiations, was reached after Lewis summoned to Washington the UMW's 200-man wage policy committee to sit in on talks. The contract raises miners' pay 70 cents a day and adds 10 cents a ton to their pension fund.

Harry Moses, president of the H. C. Frick Coal & Coke Co. of Pittsburgh, estimated it would add 25 cents a ton to the cost of producing bituminous coal.

President Joseph E. Moody of the Southern Coal Producers Asso-

Wages—$15 a day. They got $14.75, up 70 cents from the old contract.

Hours—Seven and a half, with six hours of actual work, the balance to cover underground travel and a paid lunch period. They settled on the old terms—pay for an eight-hour day, 6½ hours of which is in actual production.

Welfare Fund—35 cents a ton for disability, hospital and medical, death and pension benefits. The settlement was for 30 cents, up 10 cents from the old level.

Union Shop—A union shop, under which all miners would agree to become members of the UMW. Such a provision was included in the settlement, with the stipulation that the parties will abide by a Supreme Court ruling, now being sought, on legality of the union shop.

Willing and Able—Retention of the old contract clause which said the miners will work when they are willing and able. For this was substituted a declaration of the "good faith and mutual understanding" of the parties. Inclusion was designed to allay union fears that it might be sued for wildcat strike damages.

Memorial Periods—The union sought inclusion of the old clause permitting periods to commemorate deaths of mine victims. The contract provides for such periods, but limits them to five days a year.

Effective Dates—Contract effective March 5; runs through June 30, 1952, except that either side may terminate on 30 days notice on or after April 1, 1951.

Lewis Signs, Orders Mining Resumed

clation indicated that retail prices would have to be increased to meet the added cost of production. Operators, he declared, would have to raise prices 50 cents a ton at the mine to meet this cost and makeup losses suffered during the strike. To do this, he said, "somebody" would have to pay out an additional 300 million dollars next year.

It contained these new provisions:

1. A pay raise of 70 cents a day, boosting daily pay to $14.75.

2. An increase in payments by industry to the miners' welfare fund of 10 cents a ton on all coal mined, bringing the total to 30 cents a ton.

3. All payments withheld from the welfare fund since the last contract expired must be paid by March 15. This applies particularly to 1919 Southern operators, who are said to have kept back an estimated five million dollars.

4. The clause in previous contracts providing that miners would work only when "able and willing" was dropped. In its place is a clause declaring the good faith and "mutual understanding" of both parties.

5. Layoff periods designated as "memorials" were limited to five days a year. These "memorial" layoffs had been a device for halting work without calling strikes.

Not included in the contract but incident to its acceptance by Lewis was an agreement that attachments and damage suits against the union in Ohio, Kentucky and some other States be dropped.

The contract also provided for some changes in administration of the welfare fund. Lewis will be continued as chairman and trustee for the UMW. The new operators trustee will be Charles A. Owen of New York, of the Imperial Coal Co. Josephine Roche, director of the fund and a United Mine Workers employe, will be neutral trustee.

Named Exlusive Agent

The closed shop issue was avoided by naming the UMW exclusive bargaining agent for the miners. That part of the Taft-Hartley Act which declares the closed shop illegal is now before the courts for a test of its constitutionality.

Settlement of the differences between the miners and the industry brought an end to President Truman's request for congressional enactment of an emergency measure to seize the mines. The President, however, will continue to press for legislation designed to create a commission to investigate the "sick" soft coal industry and seek a remedy.

George H. Love, spokesman for Northern and Western commercial operators, demurred at Mr. Truman's diagnosis in a post-signing statement which hailed the contract as a result of "mutual understanding." It will, he declared, "give the industry its first real opportunity for stability in the last decade."

This coal business is not a sick industry as has been said recently," he continued. "This country is one of a very few where coal mining is still in private hands operating under a free enterprise system. It carried the country's enormous needs during the war and since without Government help.

"It is a modern, aggressive industry with three to six times the productivity of the coal industry in any other country and we are going to do better than that."

Lewis, surrounded by joyful members of his wage policy committee who had witnessed the signing, also issued a statement. Stabbing the air with a long unlighted cigar to punctuate and emphasize his remarks, he described the contract as a "constructive accomplishment for the industry." The UMW, he declared, "stands for the public to have coal at the lowest possible price consistent with the interests of the mine workers," and added triumphantly:

"We have benefited all labor and we have benefited all citizens who live under our flag.

More Bread and Butter

"The United Mine Workers have emerged from this struggle with additional bread and butter for their families, with additional life and death benefits for their ailing, with their union intact, with their membership unimpaired and with all labor benefited by the discrediting of the Taft-Hartley abomination."

The first sure indication that an agreement had been reached came when Moody emerged from the meeting on the ninth floor of the Statler at 4:02 p. m. and told reporters he was going to present the agreement to his colleagues. Three minutes later, other operators appeared and said they expected the contract would be signed at 5 p. m.

Then, two minutes after that, Lewis came out of the room, followed by an impressive retinue, and shouldered his way down the hall, saying nothing.

Arrives Late, Poses

The UMW president appeared in the Federal Room at 5:25, where operator representatives had been waiting for some time. After a few perfunctory handshakes, he seated himself at the table under the glare of floodlights and posed for pictures, scowling under his heavy brows and finally throwing up a hand with the order:

"That's enough."

Still scowling, while newsreel cameras whirred and still photographers jockeyed for position, he put his flowing signature on the historic document.

Airline Help Votes to Stay Out on Strike

With only about 500 votes still to be accounted for, striking American Airlines maintenance employes voted 2500 to 174 yesterday to remain on strike.

The employes, members of the CIO Transport Workers' Union, took a country-wide vote on a National Mediation Board proposal to return to work while the board mediated the issues.

A mediation session was set for 10 a. m. this morning at the board offices here. Francis A. O'Neill, chairman of the board, last night said it "was reasonable to assume" that there would be no mediation if the workers stayed out.

An American Airlines spokesman said company representatives will show up for the session but the company's position will remain unchanged—it will mediate only if the strikers resume work.

Elmer Cobel, secretary-treasurer of the Washington local, said union representatives also will attend the session but the union has not yet determined its position before the board.

Asking for a 20-cent-an-hour increase and other benefits, the union struck Wednesday, forcing American to cut its operations by 80 percent. At National Airport, American's 74 flights per day were reduced to 14.

The Washington local voted 41 to 3 to return to work during mediation but the national trend was overwhelmingly the other way, according to United Press reports.

In Tulsa, Okla., where the largest number of the company's maintenance men are stationed, the vote was 913 to 20 to stay out. Workers in New York City, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo also voted to keep striking.

Those in Boston, El Paso, Nashville and Memphis favored returning to work. Returns in Fort Worth, Dallas and Los Angeles were still not in late last night.

Traffic Safety Meeting Set Here Thursday

The National Committee for Traffic Safety, public support group for furthering the Action Program of the President's Highway Safety Conference, will hold its annual meeting here at the Hotel Statler on March 9.

A feature of the session will be a symposium "Is the Public Really Interested in Traffic Safety?" Participants will include Rudolph F. King, executive director of the President's Highway Safety Conference and Registrar of Motor Vehicles in Massachusetts; Harry E. Thompson, secretary of the Mayor's Traffic Safety Committee, Evansville, Ind.; William Foulis, Colorado Highway Safety Council, and John Rostmeyer of the Baltimore Safety Council. Sidney Williams of Chicago, assistant to the president of the National Safety Council, will act as moderator.

Principal speaker at the meeting which will follow will be Dr. Clarence C. Little, director of the Roscoe B. Jackson Memorial Laboratory, Bar Harbor, Maine.

Attending the session will be representatives of 85 national organizations. Harold P. Jackson, president of the Bankers Indemnity Insurance Co. of Newark, will preside.

Communism Spread in Asia Laid to Hunger

London, March 5 (AP).—Hunger and not politics is responsible for the spread of communism in Asia, Lord Boyd Orr asserted today.

The former director-general of the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization and 1949 Nobel peace prize winner said in a speech prepared for delivery to the Association of Scientific Workers:

"Today the people of Asia, who have so long borne poverty with resignation as something which was inevitable, have come to believe that if they could take their countries into their own hands and establish a new order they could abolish hunger and poverty.

"This revolt against hungar and poverty is the fundamental cause of the upsurge of Asia, which is by far the most important political problem of our day. The likelihood is that it will spread into other countries—Africa, the Middle East and Latin America.

"It was no use saying that this was just the spread of communism. It was true that the Communists took advantage of it and promised the people what they wanted, but if the Communists can deliver the goods no military force will stop the spread of communism among the ill-fed people of the world."

levels. During peacetime, they can help to provide the realistic sustained abundance of agricultural commodities that all of us desire.

"The question that confronts us is not whether or not there should be a price-support program. Our problem today is to develop methods of price support which will give farmers income protection, and at the same time efficiently serve the farmer and his family; not discriminate unfairly against any group in our economy; operate efficiently with costs commensurate with the benefits to the Nation; and serve the general objectives of the Nation."

Specifically, Brannan said, an additional method of supporting agricultural prices is needed.

"Existing methods depend chiefly on Government purchases and loans, which cannot satisfactorily support the prices of perishable products. Yet perishable products are those in which expanded production is most desirable. Moreover, some perishables are major sources of farm income. To be fully effective, the price-support program should provide as definitely for them as for important storable commodities.

"Accordingly," he asserted, "I have urged and I continue to urge . . . production payments for perishable agricultural products."

Water Supply Shut Off In Maine City of 3300

Eastport, Me., March 5 (U.P.).—All water supplies were shut off here today and some 3300 residents were warned to guard against fire.

Officials said water pressure dropped to an alarming low at 11 a. m. when all mains, including those carrying drinking water, were closed. They said they did not know what caused the low pressure but believed that a main line had frozen or broken.

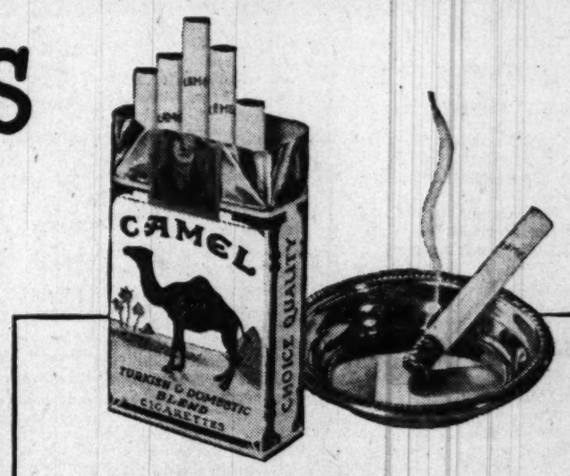
NOTED THROAT SPECIALISTS REPORT ON 30-DAY TEST OF CAMEL SMOKERS...

Not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking CAMELS

Yes, these were the findings of noted throat specialists after a total of 2,470 weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels — and only Camels — for 30 consecutive days.

Lovely young radio songstress and recording star
FRAN WARREN
"SINGING IS VERY EXACTING ON THE THROAT—THE 30-DAY TEST WON ME OVER TO CAMELS FOR MILDNESS AND TASTE!"

CROWNED the "Queen of Song" by the American Academy of Entertainment, pretty Fran Warren has rocketed to the top among the nation's most popular female vocalists. Her velvety voice has put over many of the best-selling records of the year.



MAKE A NOTE... REMEMBER YOUR THROAT!

SECRETARY Agnes Doyle: "Cigarette mildness is important to me. I made the 30-Day Test and found that Camels agree with my throat!"

NEWSCASTER George Hayes: "I can't take chances on throat irritation. I pick my cigarette for mildness—Camel! And Camel has the flavor!"

INFORMATION CLERK Jean Gammon: "My job is answering questions all day. I smoke Camels. The 30-Day Test proved how mild Camels are!"

THE TEST! Smoke only Camels for 30 days. Compare them in your "T-Zone." See if you don't agree Camels are the mildest, best-tasting cigarette!

Schumacher Assails Franco-Saar Accord

Saar Split Held Keynote Of Talks Here

By The Associated Press

The suddenly critical French-German split over the Saar has posed a sharp new problem for high level American Government conferences on German policy opening here today.

State Department officials said yesterday they hoped the latest outbreak of French-German difficulties can be worked off without causing real injury to projects for western European unity. But they are by no means certain this can be accomplished.

United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy arrived Saturday from Germany to testify before congressional committees on funds required for the American operation there. He will have an intensive round of talks on German problems with top Government officials.

These conferences have now been complicated, officials conceded, by the following facts:

1. On Friday, France and the semiindependent government of the coal-rich Saar land completed an agreement under which France will take the Saar's coal for 50 years and the Saarlanders have a promise of complete independence in 50 years, according to reports from Paris.

2. On Saturday, West German Chancellor Conrad Adenauer, reflecting the Saar's importance as a German political issue, charged that terms of the French-Saar agreement had damaged German faith in the Western Allies.

3. Yesterday, Washington officials admitted deep worry. They indicated that the objective of American diplomacy in this instance would be to try to minimize the problem in the interest of the greater purpose of European unity.

Along with the question of dovetailing Germany into a broader European organization, State Department officials are also concerned with a parellel economic problem, that is how to find markets for the increasing production of German, British and French factories so that their output may serve the aims of an expanding economy.

Russia, with its own huge capacity for absorbing industrial goods, is in position to bid for the German output not only for its own market but for the potentially great Chinese market.

There also may be some effort on the part of this country, presumably in conjunction with Britain and France, to make clear the record on the attitude of the Western Allies toward the Saar question in advance of the French-Saar agreement.

American officials indicated that their understanding was that the United States, Britain and France had advised Adenauer several days ago what the line of the agreement would be and had emphasized that the French were making the whole thing subject to any future German peace treaty. They considered that this should have minimized the political effects of the agreement in Germany.

Neuss, Germany, March 5 (AP).—West Germany's Socialist leader, Kurt Schumacher, tonight described the Franco-Saar treaty as "a success for Soviet Communists and German Nationalists."

Schumacher, chairman of the powerful Social Democratic Party, said the treaty will provide the Communists and Nationalists with fresh ammunition to attack the West German republic. The treaty gives France the Saar coal mines for 50 years in return for near autonomy for the Saar.

Addressing a meeting of Social Democratic officials, Schumacher said:

"If we want to preserve Europe, it is our duty to be watchdogs lest Europe is rebuilt along the wrong lines. A wrongly constructed house will not be able to stand against the political hurricane from the East."

His assault on the treaty followed by one day a statement by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer that the possibility of West Germany joining a European union would have to be reconsidered because of the Saar accord.

[Adenauer said the treaty had done severe damage to German faith in the Western Allies and charged its terms were in contradiction to statements made to him by United States, British and French representatives.

[The Chancellor held the treaty would bolster the nationalistic tendencies of the Germans, endangered German-French relations and threatened hopes of European unity.

[He told the New York Times correspondent the Saar mines were the property of the old Reich, to which the new federal government fell heir under the constitution approved by the West.

[The political aspects of the agreement were astounding to him, he said, because French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman had told him the French were interested only in economic concessions, with the Sarr returning ultimately to Germany.

[He also cited statements he said had been forwarded to him by Secretary of State Dean Acheson, in which Acheson declared the French were not receiving "carte blanche" but that a final settlement would be made at the peace table.]

Gun Blast Kills Man Trying to Invade Home

Detroit, March 5 (AP).—Johnny Gach, 34, an associate of former Purple Gangsters, was shot and killed tonight by a shotgun blast.

Police said Gach apparently was killed by a man who resisted a burglary attempt at a house here. Gach had been arrested before for burglaries.

Arthur Baranowski, 23, told police he fired through the door at two men who tried to force their way into his home. The blast killed Gach.

Wife Found With Knife In Her Heart

Tigerton, Wis., March 5 (U.P.).—A pretty brunette clad in a red bathrobe and pink pajamas was found today with a butcher knife in her heart. Her estranged husband was seized but he denied the slaying.

The body of Myra Ruppenthal Ferry, 39, was found on the blood-spattered, disordered porch of her parents' home here. A knife protruded from her chest and bruises and cuts marked her forehead.

Authorities found Walter Ferry, 35, from whom Myra sought a divorce, at his parents' home at Marion, Wis. They came upon him as he was reading a magazine.

Denies Even Seeing Her

Ferry denied the slaying. He said that he had talked to his wife twice by telephone last night, but had not seen her.

Sheriff Hugo Baker, who ordered the search for Ferry, said of his investigation of the death, "This is murder. There is no doubt about it."

It was the first slaying in the town's history.

Ferry, a disabled war veteran, suffered from 100 percent disability due to a mental illness, officials said.

Baker said Ferry had been brooding over his wife's request for a divorce. Ferry was seen here last night, Baker said, although he had been living with his parents at Marion.

A local bartender, Lawrence Retzlaff, told police he overheard Ferry calling his wife from a tavern last night, asking her to meet him there. She refused because she was in her night clothes. When Myra called back, Retzlaff said, Ferry refused to talk to her.

Authorities said that Myra had been living alone for the last several days while her father, John C. Ruppenthal, was in Milwaukee. Last night she played canasta until midnight with some friends, including Jean Sambs, 21, who found the body.

Ferry married Myra at Shawano in 1948. The couple lived at Tigerton, Marion, and then here again before separating last November.

Since then he has lived with his parents at Marion or stayed at the Veterans Hospital at Wood near Milwaukee.

Democrats of George Papandreou also hoped to make a strong bid.

The extreme right wing in the contest was represented by Tsaldaris' Populists and Constantine Maniadakis and Constantine Kotzias, both ministers in the Metaxas dictatorship who are operating under the banner of the new independent Political Front. Also in the right bloc of parties was Gen. Napoleon Zervas, anti-Communist resistance leader during the Nazi occupation, who leads the National Party, and Spiro Markezinis, leader of the New Party.

Angelos Bouropoulos, Minister of Public Order, said when the polls closed "there has not been the slightest incident reported. The election has been conducted in an unprecedentedly orderly manner."

Best Authority On Speech Is You, Professor Says

Ithaca, N. Y., March 5 (AP).—Are you bothered by your grammar? Do you say "It is me" instead of "It is I?"

Don't worry about it or you may develop an inner conflict and become confused and insecure, says a Cornell University authority on languages.

When someone asks you who you are, go right on saying "It's me."

"A dictionary or grammar is not as good an authority for your speech as the way you, yourself speak," says Prof. Robert A. Hall, jr., of Cornell's division of modern languages.

Hall contends the English language and our teaching of it are cluttered up with "folkloristic notions" and "school dogmas."

His own rule for "good" English is this:

"English which gets the desired effect with the least friction and difficulty for its user.

"That means, of course, that 'good' language is going to vary with the situation it is used in."

Roosevelt Papers To Be Opened

Franklin D. Roosevelt's papers will be opened at Hyde Park, N. Y., on March 17—the forty-fifth wedding anniversary of the late President and Anna Eleanor Roosevelt.

Dr. Waldo Gifford Leland will deliver the main address at the formal ceremonies, it was announced yesterday. Dr. Leland is director emeritus of the American Council of Learned Societies.

Mrs. Rosevelt also will speak at the ceremonies in the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library.

About 85 percent of the total volume of the late Chief Executive's papers will be available for research after March 17. The remaining 15 percent will be reexamined periodically to determine which may be opened to public research.

East Germans Plan Trade Pact With Russia and Red China

Leipzig, Germany, March 5 (AP).—The Communist-dominated East German government said today a trade pact with Soviet Russia is almost completed and that one will be negotiated with Communist China.

Foreign Trade Minister George Handke told newsmen attending the opening of the Leipzig Fair of the plans to tie East Germany into an intercontinental Russian-led trade bloc.

The fair is a bid by Russian-occupied Germany for world trade.

Talks Almost Complete

Handke said he is going to Moscow this week to conclude the East German Republic's first trade pact with the Soviet Union. He said negotiations in Moscow have already been arranged for Russia to deliver not only foodstuffs but industrial raw materials "which exceed our expectations by far."

East Germany's industry is dominated by Soviet stock companies which have taken over prewar German firms. Russia takes a large, but officially secret, share of current production as reparations. Handke said at least 80 percent of East Germany's trade is with Russia and countries in the Soviet sphere.

The minister revealed East Germany will send a delegation to Peiping in May to negotiate an economic agreement with Chinese Communist Leader Mao Tze-tung. He said the pact is expected to be signed in June.

Fair Aims at World Markets

The Leipzig Fair is an indication of the Communist determination to hit world markets.

Eastern state-owned industries ranging from microscopes to locomotives contributed 2300 of the 7500 foreign and German exhibits. All in all, there are about 6700 exhibitors from Eastern Germany, plus about 100 from foreign countries, mostly Soviet satellite areas.

Buyers from Chicago, Stockholm and Bombay were among the 6000 foreigners due to inspect the Soviet zone wares.

Despite the political division of their country, 750 West German manufacturers participated in this, the largest German fair since the war.

The Soviet Union overshadowed all exhibitors by taking over an entire pavilion for its display of propaganda and technical products.

A 16-foot statue of Stalin confronted the thousands of opening-day visitors at the pavilion. Quotations from his speeches decorated the walls, including the claim that Soviet production technique "has attained the first place in the world."

The German public found the most interesting Soviet products to be copies of 1948 models of American passenger cars. These were not for sale. Soviet officials declined to name their price or possible delivery arrangements.

Russian-operated "intourist" hotels and restaurants were patronized by the wealthiest visitors, at high prices in foreign currency. East Germans confied themselves to rationed food. Many small businessmen, regardless of their fear of police agents, hinted to foreigners that they are rapidly going broke because of government pressure.

They said there is a powerful trend toward concentrating all retail trade in state-owned chain stores. Manufacturing is now about 90 percent "people's owned."

Veteran Slovak Red Is Slain While at Work in His Office

Prague, March 5 (U.P.).—The veteran Slovak Communist, Izidor Tausinger, was murdered in his office Friday, the Slovak Communist Party paper Pravda reported today.

Pravda gave no inkling as to whether the slayer was caught.

"On March 3, 1950, Comrade Izidor Tausinger fell under the hand of a foul murderer," it said.

Tausinger, "an old Bolshevik, who has been with the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia since it was founded in 1921," was killed "while he was at work," it said. It gave no other details.

Pravda said Tausinger fought with the Red Guards at Leningrad during the Russian revolution before he joined the Czech party. He worked as an officer until 1939, when the party was outlawed by the Nazis. Then, the paper said, he joined the underground. During the war the Nazis threw him into jail three times.

The Prague press also announced that the Czechoslovak journalists' union has expelled Vilem Novy, former editor in chief of the Communist organ Rude Pravo, because he has been "unmasked as an agent in the service of imperialists."

Everything at Steak!

by Albert Parchey Mesirow

YOU'VE been seeing me around Washington for so long in a restaurant that maybe you won't recognize me right away in a column. But here I am, and here I will be every Monday morning . . . until and unless the editors of The Post get jealous of my literary talent and throw me out.

The idea of this column is to record, for your amusement, some of the happenings at Parchey's. Since we've become more or less famous for Steaks! Steaks! Steaks! a lot of very interesting people (and some important ones) have been coming in regularly, and I think you might find it worth while to read about them.

For instance, Hirsh de la Viez, the eminent coin machine tycoon and President of the Washington Music Guild, had a luncheon meeting at Parchey's with the vice presidents of his Gasoline Key Club. Which leads me to wonder if there is anything in the rumor that the Standard Oil Company is buying a 40% interest in this venture. Anyhow, Hirsh says he's planning a testimonial dinner at our place soon, to honor, I believe he said, some public officials of Arlington County, Virginia. It ought to be a bang-up affair. Who's going to get banged up most, I wouldn't say, but I hope they do their banging out on K Street. Parchey's is no prize ring!

A couple of big guns from the Army Department were in the other day for the purpose of taking aboard some ammunition to fortify them for the Battle of the Pentagon. When Nat Hawkins (he's been a waiter at Parchey's for upward of 15 years) when Nat asked the General for his order, Mr. Two-Star said: "Gimme a hamburger."

Nat, bless his heart, was right on the ball. "Sorry, sir," he said. "We don't have hamburgers. But I can bring you a fine, juicy, tender Chopped Tenderloin Steak, if you'd like."

"What's the difference?" growled the General. "Chopped steak is just a fancy name for hamburger, isn't it? Bring me one!" So Nat hurried out to the kitchen, and in a few minutes he was back with a giant plate of sizzling Chopped Tenderloin, steaming with a sauce of tender, chopped, sweet Bermuda onions and rich natural stock. Aromatic. Tempting. Mouth-watering. The General sniffed the aroma and smiled. He put a forkful in his mouth and beamed. "Best hamburger I ever ate!" he boomed.

"Sorry, sir," said Nat. "That's not hamburger. What makes your steak so good is that it's actually the finest tenderloin, chopped . . . not ground . . . seasoned and cooked like a steak, and not fried like a hamburger!" "It's still the best hamburger I ever tasted!" said the General. Nat came back to the kitchen really worried. "I hope we don't get into war with the Russians," he said. "We wouldn't have a chance with people like that running our Army!"

Cheer up, Nat. After all, the General did say it was the best he ever ate, didn't he? And if he wants to call it hamburger, let him. It's true that you gave him Chopped Tenderloin Steak, but at Parchey's, the customer is always right . . . even when he's as wrong as the General!

By the way, dear reader, how long since you've had one of our Chopped Tenderloin Steak lunches for a dollar? Better come in and try one soon. The address, you know, is the southwest corner of 19th and K nw.

steaks! steaks! steaks!

In the days of the so-called "Phoney War," a big British banking firm was busy building a monster air raid shelter for its help. When the shelter was completed, a mock raid warning was given, and the hundreds of employes went scurrying in like moles to a tunnel. Afterwards the personnel manager, a very punctilious and correct lady, was asked to obtain reactions to the shelter from employes, and any suggestions for its improvement. This she did, and submitted her report to the directors.

At the next board meeting, the personnel manager was summoned. "We find it very interesting" said the chairman, "that 92% of all our female employes say that they suffer from claustrophobia. Are you sure that you explained to them exactly what claustrophobia is?

"Indeed I did!" exclaimed the lady with heat. "I told them that claustrophobia is fear of confinement!"

And on this happy note, I will leave you until next Monday. Hope to see you at Parchey's before then. The address is 19th at K. nw

Anti-Red Bill Death Without Vote Is Hinted

By the United Press

Senate Democratic leaders hinted yesterday that the controversial Mundt-Ferguson Communist-control bill may be allowed to die without ever coming to a floor vote.

But Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), cosponsor of the bill, said he was confident its bipartisan supporters can force Senate action before adjournment.

The bill, which was approved Saturday by the Senate Judiciary Committee, would provide heavy fines and jail sentences for anyone who "conspires" to set up a Communist dictatorship in America. It also would require Communists and front organizations to register with the Justice Department, and label their mail as red propaganda.

Rep. Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee, said he would introduce an identical bill in the House today. He said he would press for early action there.

A sharp fight is assured if the bill does reach the Senate floor. Sen. Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), opened the attack yesterday by charging that some provisions of the bill are so vague and sweeping that "several million" loyal and innocent American citizens might be subject to prosecution.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), declined to comment, but he made it plain the bill would receive a low priority on the legislative calendar.

With lawmakers eager to adjourn as early as possible and return home for election-year fence-mending, it appeared unlikely that the bill could be passed unless its supporters managed to wangle a high place on the calendar.

$101,900,736 to Clear Slums Sought by 49 Municipalities

for District of Columbia participation in the national program is now pending before the District Commissioners.

The request will include, Lansburgh said, an application for an advance from the Housing and Home Finance Agency to make plans, open an office and administer the loans.

Forty-nine cities in 17 States already have requested the Federal Government to reserve grant funds amounting to $101,900,736 for a slum clearance and urban redevelopment programs. The Division of Slum Clearance and Urban Redevelopment has already approved these grants in the amount of $77,748,650.

This means in effect that the city councils in these 49 cities already have had to approve a plan for slum clearance for the redevelopment of the slum and blighted areas involved, and promise to work on a plan to rehouse those in the affected areas.

Keith warned, however, that in reading these figures the public must not be misled into thinking that the slums and the necessary rebuilding and public housing involved can spring up overnight.

He estimates that it will take any city starting from scratch four or five years before its initial plans can be translated into brick and stone.

Despite indications of ready city acceptance of the slum clearance program, officials point out there will be many tough obstacles in the way of actual performance. The first problem, bigger than the public generally realizes, is that of getting the proper authorization through the city council.

Then comes the creation of plans not only for slum clearance but land redevelopment and rehousing which must be acceptable to the Federal Government, as well as to local authorities. One of the toughest hurdles cities will face will be actually securing the land, which will take not only months of negotiation with private owners, but in most cases will necessitate recourse to the courts with condemnation action.

Cities must also show they can relocate those who are moved from slum areas, or otherwise a displaced persons problem will arise. In the case of those living in slums whose incomes are low enough to qualify them for public housing, it will be merely a question of building such accommodations. Considerably more difficult will be the problem of taking care of persons paying high rents in the slums because they can find no other dwellings, whose income is too high to qualify them for public housing.

The one city ready to jump right into action after Congress passed the law was Chicago, which has already started on its Redevelopment Project No. 1, the clearing of approximately one hundred acres of slums in the near South Side of Chicago's Loop. The Windy City has made a contract with the New York Life Insurance Company to build 1400 dwelling units on the land. These may be garden-type apartments.

Keith estimated that if the whole 500 million dollars authorized by Congress is eventually expended about 10 percent of the Nation's far-flung slum areas can be removed.

Slum aid by the Federal Government is expected to set up something of a chain reaction which may well have results far exceeding the scope of the Federal program.

Cuts Crime

As communities learn through practical experience how cleared slums result in cutting down costs of crime, disease and all the evils intensified by slum conditions, they may well find it feasible and profitable to undertake some projects on their own.

Some idea of the non-sectional character of interest in slum clearance can be gleaned from a mere listing of some of the cities and the amounts allotted.

Portrex Force Will Try New Plan of Attack

Ramey Air Base, Puerto Rico, March 5 (U.P.).—Commanders of the Portrex Caribbean war games today disclosed plans to try out a new kind of amphibious attack geared to the Atomic Age.

Revised assault tactics—featuring wide dispersal of attacking forces—will be tested under simulated battle conditions Wednesday when airborne and seaborne units land on "hostile" Vieques Island, 6 miles southeast of Puerto Rico.

The attack will highlight the joint Army-Navy-Air Force maneuvers under way in the Caribbean.

A record-size for peacetime, the war games involve 80,000 fighting men from all three services, 160 warships and 500 planes.

The new amphibious warfare tactics call for dispersal so that attacking forces will never be massed together enough to present a worthwhile target for an enemy atomic bomb. Speed also will be emphasized.

Air Force May Shelve Jet Bomber Program

the cost of B-52's run from 8 to above 10 million dollars apiece—for the first sizable production orders plus development costs. It is argued on behalf of the new proposal that the Air Force will get most airplanes for its money if it buys modernized B-36's, while a large part of the funds spent for entering into a big B-52 program would go for tooling for the first couple of years.

Another billion-dollar big-bomber program—perhaps nearer two billion for the B-52—would take a lion's share of Air Force procurement funds. Testimony given the House Appropriations Committee by USAF officials is that it will require $1,500,000,000 in plane procurement funds next year to keep the Air Force's 48-groups modern. This will mount to two billion dollars a year by 1954, it was said.

Under the 13-billion-dollar defense budget that Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson says will be maintained for the next two years at least, two billion dollars is allotted to aircraft procurement. Close to one third of this goes to naval aviation.

The B-36 modification plan thus is advanced to meet the hard facts of the budget ceiling. Its aim is not to expand the size of the Nation's heavy bomber fleet, but to enable it to do its job.

Almost everyone concedes that at some point, the present B-36 will be extremely vulnerable to jet fighters. The only question is when. Navy critics of the bomber say it is now. Air Force proponents declare the time is off in the future.

The admirals have said that jet bombers with fighter escorts are required to get through enemy defenses and that we must rely on advance bases in view of present limited ranges of jet aircraft. Air Force chiefs—at least the majority of them—have backed the intercontinental bomber.

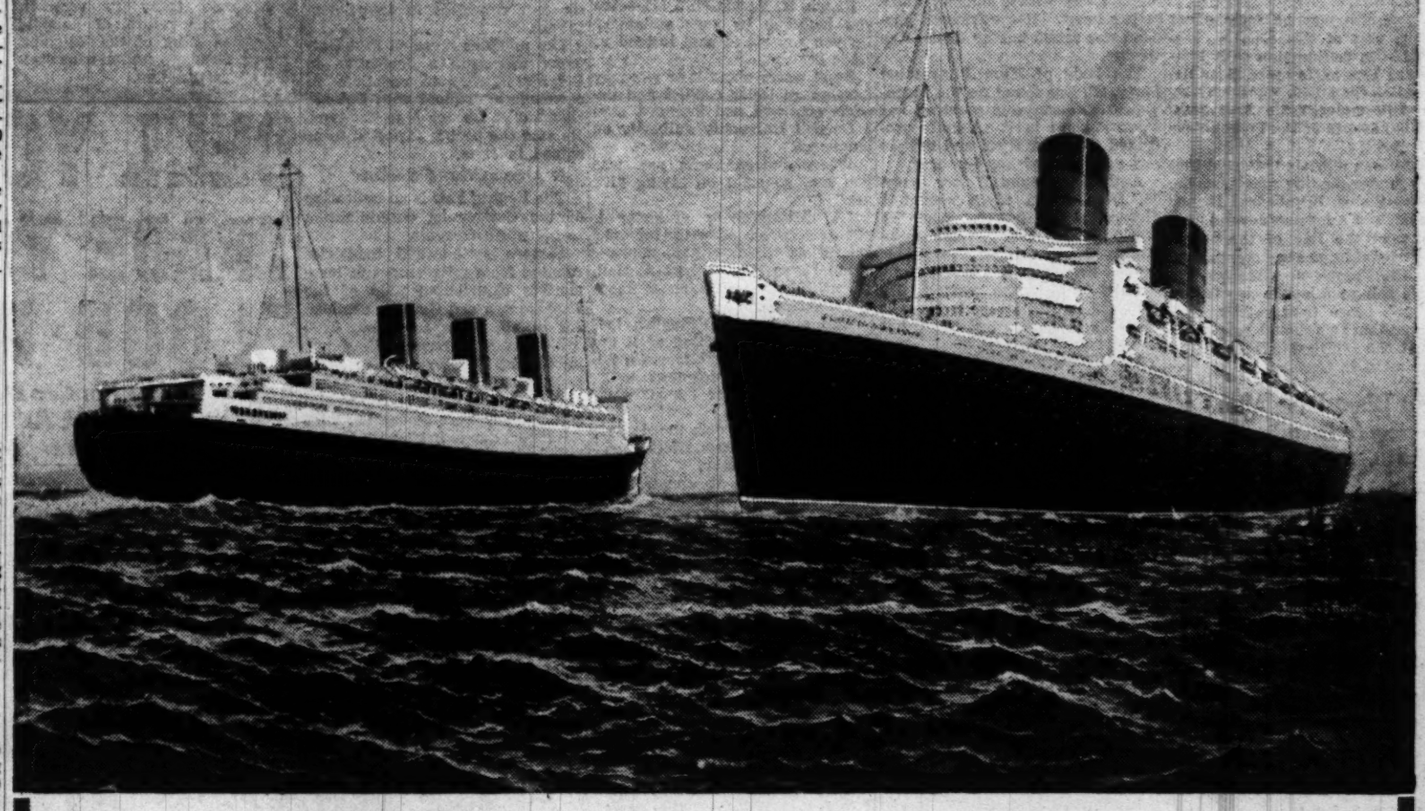
The Quiet Pulse of Dependability



"Life aboard a Cunarder is gracious living at its best"

● It's as steady as a metronome . . . this beat of a great ship's heart. It's quiet . . . so quiet, that it's hard to put your finger on it. Yet it's there . . . a constant rhythm . . . the quiet pulse of dependability.

Some sense it in personal things . . . the inspiration of a menu . . . the bouquet of a wine . . . the piquancy of a sauce . . . every facet of the subtle art of dining. Others find it in the care-free good spirits of their companions . . . relaxing 'mid the brilliance of international chic. For all, it reveals itself in seamanship . . . the smooth efficiency of leaving port . . . the sure course across a trackless ocean.

Here, in this world between two continents, is every luxury of life on land, created and maintained by stewards and stewardesses, engineers and seamen . . . many of whom have followed parents and grandparents into Cunard service. Together, they blend their separate skills into a single achievement . . .

DEPENDABILITY

Yes, it is men and women who give a ship her life . . . turn her grace into graciousness . . . make trustworthy the mere quality of strength. It's their pulse you will feel in every Cunard White Star voyage . . .

A pulse that beats for your comfort . . . for your peace of mind.

Attlee Said To Have Bevan Wing in Line

London, March 5 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee has persuaded the radical left wing of the Labor Party to support his decision not to attempt any further nationalization of industry in the present Parliament, political quarters reported tonight.

The Labor leftists, led by Health Minister Aneurin Bevan, were in rebellious mood over Attlee's decision to go slow on socialistic legislation because of his tiny seven-seat majority in the new House of Commons.

But it was reported today, on the eve of the formal opening of the new Parliament, that the leftists had been persuaded that to get tough with the opposition would only mean asking for trouble.

Britain's parliamentary battle of the century opens Monday when King George reads his "speech from the throne"—actually written by the cabinet—outlining the Labor government's legislative program.

It is reported authoritatively that the speech will make no mention of further nationalization schemes.

A measure nationalizing the great iron and steel industry already has been enacted. But it will not go into effect until next January 1—and because of the small majority Labor won in the February 23 election there will be almost certainly a new election before then.

It was reported tonight that in debate on the King's speech the Conservatives may take the offensive and try to force the government to make some declaration on the iron and steel plan.

By means of an amendment to the King's speech, the Conservatives may "deplore the failure" of the government to promise to cancel the iron and steel program entirely.

Winston Churchill, as opposition leader, was given the final draft of the King's speech tonight so he could plan his strategy and tactics.

Early clashes are sure on the supplementary defense and national health service appropriations the government must ask, and on the budget for the fiscal year which starts April 1.

An indication that Attlee had won over his party's left wing was given today by an article in the newspaper Sunday Pictorial by Richard Crossman, a leftist leader. Crossman said that Bevan, the leftist leader in the cabinet, is "far too shrewd to rock the boat."

"The left wing of the Labor Party, just as much as the right wing, appreciated the leadership of the Prime Minister during the election, and trusts him to time the next election wisely, and meanwhile to carry on a genuinely Socialist administration.

"Fortunately, the bulk of Socialist legislation was all carried in the last Parliament and, whatever the size of its majority, the main task of this government would have been not passing new laws, but running in the brand-new planned Socialist economy and removing its many obvious defects."

Signs of War On Increase, Spellman Says

Rome, March 5 (AP).—Francis Cardinal Spellman today warned that signs of war are increasing.

He urged the faithful to be "always prepared for death."

In one of his gravest pronouncements, the visiting Archbishop of New York told reporters:

"Last week it was published in newspapers that American scientists say it is possible to construct one bomb capable of destroying all human life.

"While we hope and pray and strive for peace, we nevertheless must be, as Catholics, always prepared for death. Certainly, signs telling of the 'abomination of desolation' are increasing."

The cardinal said he had not discussed questions of war or peace with Pope Pius in a private audience last Friday.

"I found the Holy Father just as healthy and spry as on my last visit," the cardinal added.

Earlier, Cardinal Spellman said mass in his centuries-old titular basilica of Saints John and Paul and prayed for the welfare of America and its citizens.

An estimated 1500 persons, including more than 600 Holy Year pilgrims from the United States attended the mass.

In a brief sermon following the mass, Cardinal Spellman exhorted America to remain steadfast in faith and offered prayers that the Nation continue to resist evil forces. The cardinal referred repeatedly to "America, our America."

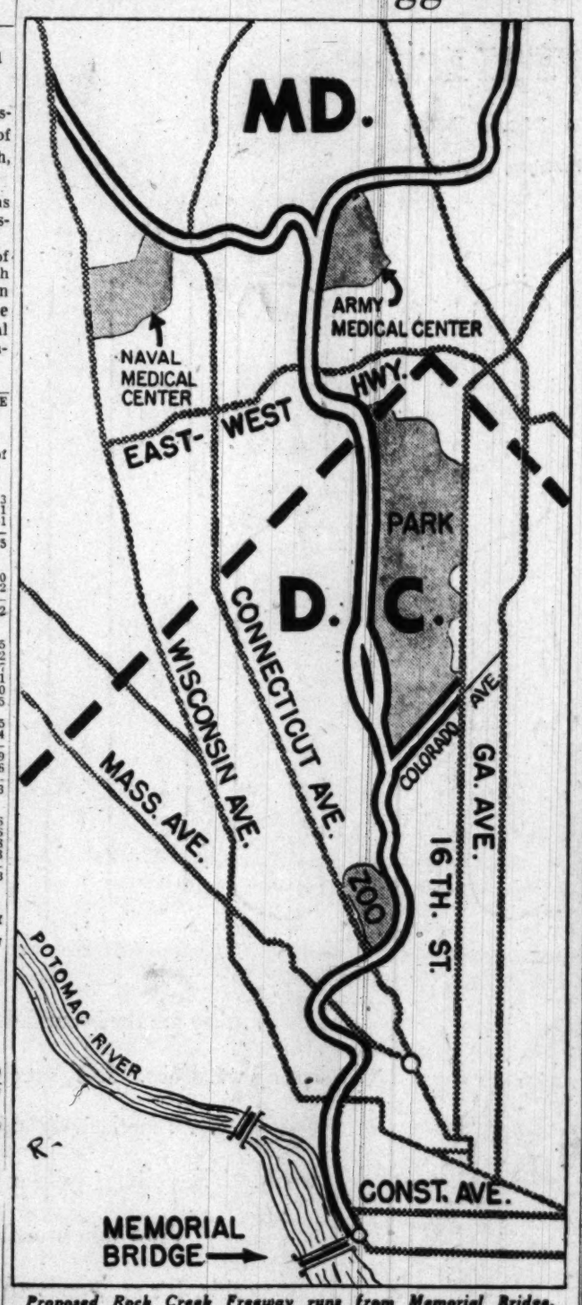
Road Planners at Loggerheads Over Proposed Rock Creek Park Freeway



Proposed Rock Creek Freeway runs from Memorial Bridge, beyond District Line, into Montgomery Park areas

Creek Park Extended to the west to the Rockville pike and, in part, of Sligo Creek Parkway to the east to the Wheaton area.

Fortunately, the great bulk of all the land necessary for such a vast freeway is already in public hands. Normally, about half the cost of a freeway is land acquisition. Nowhere else in America could such a route be driven from vast and populous suburbs to the very heart of the downtown city for so little expense.

How to pay for it? The financing problem for this expressway and for the others covered in the first article in this series will be considered in the third, and final article.

In 1946, the Greiner, DeLeuw and Maguire engineering firm prepared a transportation plan for Washington at the request of the Commissioners. It laid out a series of expressways, calling them "an engineering answer to the public's desire for highways that make travel fast, fluid and foolproof."

A Bethesda-Chevy Chase or Silver Spring resident could travel to the Lincoln Memorial area on such a limited access road, not at a 25-mile city speed limit but at nearly twice that rate. And he would arrive, via the Rock Creek Freeway, with nerves far less frayed than if he struggled downtown on 16th st. or Connecticut ave.

A route has been pretty well agreed on. Picking up the present parkway at the Connecticut ave. bridge, it would follow the east side of the creek, swing to the east of the Zoo necessitating one short tunnel and one major cut) to Piney Branch rd. and then to Blagden ave. and the proposed extension of Colorado ave., leading to 16th st.

From here a bridge would carry it to the west side of the park and onto high ground. It would follow the line of Oregon ave., the west boundary of the park, almost to the District line, with that avenue probably becoming a service road leading to the various interchanges entering the parkway.

One consideration in extending the parkway into Maryland at a multi-million dollar cost is what it would do to the traffic load on the already existing section. opinions differ as to the degree of traffic saturation at peak hours but it is somewhere between 75 and 100 percent.

Another is that it would be necessary to rebuild the entire section, perhaps into six lanes. Gen. Young figures that to do so would run to five million dollars, about four million dollars for rebuilding several of the bridges crossing overhead which now restrict the parkway.

One suggestion is that broadening the present four 10-foot strips to 12 feet each (standard for expressways today) would in effect make a true four-lane highway out of what is being driven as a three-lane route.

All of these are problems. But the traffic-weary residents of much of northwest Washington and all of nearby Montgomery County have only to look at the map to see that it's either a Rock Creek Park freeway or nothing.

One on the Aisle—

A Major Barrett Of Ninth Street

By Richard L. Coe

ANOTHER MAJOR "BARRETT" of the week is a remarkable young woman, delicate of features, strong of purpose: Susan Peters, who tonight becomes the first star to head a professional acting company inside a downtown Washington theater since July 31, 1948 . . . Inside? . . . Yes, don't let's forget Judith Anderson, who played "Medea" to over 9000 persons at the Sylvan Theater last summer, a hectic, memorable evening that should have proved sooner than it has that there's an audience for theater here.

Miss Peters is remarkable on several scores . . . She surprised anxious audiences last summer by her performance of charm and sincerity in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" at Olney, an engagement so successful that it became a prelude to the present tour which reaches Washington tonight . . . Last summer was her first acting on any stage; her first role was the invalid sister in "The Glass Menagerie." She later won quick favor as Elizabeth Barrett.

Susan got her start as an actress through necessity—she was working her way through college and the cameras liked her . . . Many remember her best in "Random Harvest" and "Song of Russia" and she seemed refreshingly different from most starlets; the future looked good.

Five years ago in a hunting accident her spine was smashed and she's since been paralyzed from the waist down . . . Years in the hospital, operations and strict medical care have given her a patient forebearance plus a gritty determination to continue her career . . . Since the accident she's made one film, done a good deal of radio and now tackled the stage . . . Finding good roles is a sore problem, but once found, the stage offers the chance to stick with a part . . . Susan has a 3½-year-old adopted son, Timothy, and will show you snaps of them the minute his name's mentioned . . . Her arm of defense is her college-boy brother, whose wife has now joined the voyagers for as determined, likable a family as ever the Raleigh housed.

ANOTHER of "The Barretts" is Brandon Peters, who plays Papa, which Charles Waldron created with Miss Cornell 18 years ago . . . Peters goes back to Shakespearean rep for his early history and to Margaret Anglin's Greek Theater seasons in California . . . The East saw him in "John Ferguson, which helped put the Theater Guild on the map 30 years ago . . . Since then he's gone from "The Firebrand" and "The Jest" to "Life With Father" and a spell of acting in Australia that lured him to Tahiti for "a long vacation."

ROBERT BROWNING will be acted by a Tarheel, Robert Carroll, who thought he was studying business administration at the University of North Carolina till he could stay away from tryouts no longer . . . Radio's soap operas gave him a Gotham living, from which into Joe Ferrer's "Cyrano" (which Ferrer will now do in pictures) and as Tschaikowsky in "Music in My Heart" . . . He also played in Ferrer's New York City Center season.

IN THE RALEIGH lobby you also run into Mr. and Mrs. W. H. R. Unger of Shamokin, Pa. . . . Unger saw Miss Peters at Producer John Kenley's Lakewood Park Theater last summer, and when this tour was broached, he invested as an angel . . . The Ungers are here for tonight's opening.

NOW THAT Washington has a theater, New York this weekend was alive with producers clamoring to get playing time . . . The Bromley-Healey stewardship deal looks set, after all, and a certainty for April at the Gayety is Irene Selznick's "A Streetcar Named Desire." . . . Seems only yesterday that Mrs. Selznick had a play she wanted to try out in Washington, but rather than play the National, she booked into Philadelphia . . . That play was "Streetcar."

EVEN THE WARNER is theater-minded this week . . . An early booking on 13th st. will be "Stage Fright," an Alfred Hitchcock picture with its setting in London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Art . . . The movie people and ANTA have gotten together for some auditions in New York tomorrow, with the applicants, already selected, vying for admission to the RADA . . . Jane Wyman's the star of the Hitchcock film.

THAT VIRUS germ has put off the opening of the new Georgetown amateur theater group which Friday night was to have unveiled its musical version of "This Is It," a Bret Harte story, in the auditorium of Christ Church . . . The new date is Wednesday the 15th; the play will be presented nightly Wednesdays through Saturdays through April 8.

SENATOR A. WILLIS ROBERTSON of Virginia, father of most of the Old Dominion conservation laws, is all for the Sportsmen's and Outdoors show at the Armory, even has his candidate for the show's perfect close-harmony song, "Home Is the Hunter."

Rotarians Will Hear Ambassador Thomen

Dr. Luis F. Thomen, Ambassador of the Dominican Republic to the United States, will address the College Park, Md., Rotary Club dinner meeting Wednesday at 6:15 p. m. in the dining hall of the University of Maryland.

Dr. Thomen is author of many medical journal articles on tropical medicines. He will discuss problems between his country and the United States.

Mrs. Hunter to Speak

Mrs. Alice C. Hunter, secretary of the District Recreation Board, will discuss "Implementation of New Policy in D. C. Recreation," at 8 p. m. today during the weekly meeting of the St. Peter Claver Chapter at 1513 U st. nw.

Unedifying Spectacle

It is a tarnished Police Department that emerges from the House District Committee's unfinished investigation. Captain Richitt has quoted Major Barrett, superintendent of police, as saying that the investigation was not going the way he expected it to go. Obviously the investigators have gone much deeper into the schism within the Police Department, and into the reasons why gambling flourishes here, than the local authorities desired. But it is equally true that they have not gone far enough.

What has come to light is far from being reassuring. One of the disconcerting facts is that when the House undertook an inquiry into the laxity of the police in enforcing the antigambling laws, the matter was promptly discussed between police officers and one of the city's notorious gamblers. Captain Richitt testified that this gambler, Emmit Warring, had told him that Major Barrett, whom he identified as "the boss," had called him and told him about the investigating committee wanting to know why so few gambling arrests had been made in the Third and Seventh Precincts. Major Barrett denied this. Warring said that it was Captain Beach who gave him the information. Captain Beach later testified that this was a "misstatement of facts"—that he had told Warring only that the major had called him and complained about the lack of gambling cases in the Seventh and Third Precincts.

Here is a clear discrepancy. Where, then, did the alleged kingpin of gambling in the District learn that the committee was pressing the Police Department for these facts? Obviously that point should be thoroughly explored.

Captain Richitt has also confessed that at the request of Inspector Jefferies he changed a report on an after-hours "spot" so as to falsify that report. Where did this request originate? Is falsification of reports about suspected gambling places common practice? The testimony bristles with contradictions. Aside from that fact, it reveals the Police Department as being rent by feuds and petty jealousies that are a disgrace to any law-enforcement agency. The investigating committee has brought to light an unedifying spectacle and raised far more questions than it has answered. It is unthinkable that the inquiry should end at this point. In fairness to the Police Department and to the community it serves all the facts ought to be laid bare. We fear that conditions in the department are likely to go from bad to worse until this has been done.

King's Speech

In British practice the speech from the throne to be given today in the new Parliament is the outline of a policy for the government in power, and the King only attaches his name to it. Premier Attlee has already indicated that in view of his shoestring majority, the program will contain nothing new or spectacular. With neither the Laborites nor the Conservatives in favor of a coalition, the new government will try to limp along till the day of dissolution, contenting itself with the task, to quote Mr. Aneurin Bevan, of making "the nationalized industries function without friction." Two items stand out, however, as provocative. One is the budget, and the extent of the economies that Sir Stafford Cripps will propose. The other is the prospective nationalization of the iron and steel industry which is already legislated and is to go into effect next year and so requires a repealer to estop. Both the Conservatives and the Liberals are against this measure.

In the meantime Mr. Attlee is fighting back against the critics of his appointment of Mr. John Strachey as War Minister. Mr. Strachey, who was moved from the Food Ministry because of the unpopularity he earned in that office, insists he was never a Communist Party member, and renounced his communism in 1940. He gives a record of his public recantation. However, the explanation does not acquit Mr. Attlee of unwisdom for putting him in charge of a topmost sensitive agency of government. The wonder grows that the implications of the appointment in the larger context of the cold war and the Atlantic Alliance were not realized before Mr. Strachey was offered the job.

The omens are that the Labor government will have rough going from the start though, with the King having seen Mr. Churchill as well as Mr. Attlee within the past week, it is not impossible that for a while a working agreement has been achieved. Even if the King has nothing to do with his own speech, he is constitutionally within his rights in working behind the scenes to iron out any difficulties of the present situation which threaten to turn into a parliamentary deadlock.

Loyalty Files

The Senate resolution authorizing a Foreign Relations Subcommittee investigation of Senator McCarthy's charges concerning the State Department confronts the President, as it was no doubt intended to do, with a most disagreeable dilemma. The resolution includes an amendment by Senator Ferguson worded in the bluntest manner possible. "In the conduct of this study and investigation," it declares, "the committee is directed to procure, by subpena, and examine the complete loyalty and employment files and records of all the Government employes in the Department of State and such other agencies against whom charges have been heard." Although it is well known that the President in the past has held relinquishment of such files to be detrimental to the national interest, and although the directive "to procure by subpena" amounts to a direct legislative challenge of executive authority, the amendment was adopted with almost no debate and no consideration of the delicate constitutional issues involved.

It would be easy for the President to give these files to the investigating subcommittee. And it is, of course, within his discretion to do so. To yield them would be the most expedient way to refute the McCarthy allegations, revealing them in all their meanness and absurdity. Refusal to yield the files, on the other hand, would subject the President to the political charge that he was attempting to protect subversives. Perhaps this is precisely why Messrs. McCarthy and Ferguson forced the issue.

There are good reasons why the President should refuse to make these files available: (1) they contain material which might disclose the identity of FBI confidential sources; (2) they contain unsworn accusations, hearsay, gossip and other material which, if made public out of context, could be unjustly damaging to the subjects of the investigation; (3) they may contain material, which if published would be embarrassing or injurious to the United States in its foreign relations; (4) granting the files to a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee would set a precedent difficult to revoke if some less responsible congressional group, such as the House Committee on Un-American Activities, should make a similar demand.

But whether or not the President decides voluntarily to let the subcommittee have these files, it is plain that he cannot be compelled to do so. Indeed, the form of the Senate resolution directing that the files be procured "by subpena" is obnoxious to the constitutional separation of powers as well as to canons of good taste. Edward S. Corwin has this to say on the subject in his authoritative study, The President: Office and Powers:

> . . . the President is complete master of the situation and is entitled to select both the occasions of his communications and their content. Thus neither the President nor the Secretary of State is ever "directed" by the houses to furnish desired information or papers, but only "requested" to do so, and then only if it is "in the public interest" that they should comply—a question left to be determined by the President.

A great many Presidents of the United States from George Washington to Harry S. Truman, inclusive, have asserted and maintained this prerogative of their executive authority. Congress, for its part, has been similarly jealous of its constitutional sovereignty. Just lately, for example, when the court, in the Christoffel trial, issued a subpena duces tecum on the clerk of the House of Representatives to bring in the records of a special House committee, the House indicated that it was not subject to court order, and simply forwarded, as a matter of courtesy, a certified copy of those records. We have observed before that such peremptory commands from one of the coordinate branches of the Government to another are "in the area of the unenforceable." They should never be attempted because they violate the respect and restraint which each branch is entitled to expect of the others. As a matter of constitutional principle, the President ought not respond to a subpena from the Senate, even if he is willing to respond to a request.

Service Academies

It will be a disappointment to some believers in unification that the board studying armed service academies has recommended against a common curriculum for the first year. The board, composed of outstanding civilian educators as well as military officers, also calls for the establishment of a third academy, similar to West Point and Annapolis, for the Air Force. Behind this apparent perpetuation of division and rivalry is the board's feeling that because instruction at each academy is directed toward a specialized function, a full year of common curriculum would not be warranted.

Some inconsistency may be noted between the board's emphasis on specialized training at the academies and its recommendation that graduates be permitted to elect the service they wish to enter. Whatever the flaws in logic, however, the recommendation on giving graduates free choice has much sense behind it. So has the recommendation that with the concurrence of the departments concerned officers be permitted to transfer freely between the services—an idea advanced some time ago by General Eisenhower. Likewise, we favor the appointment procedure suggested by the board whereby members of Congress would nominate from four to ten candidates for each vacancy and the academies themselves would do the selecting by competitive examination.

There is no real reason why the creation of a third service academy need hinder unification—a goal which is achieved more through spirit than mere combined physical facilities. Actually the key is in the kind and quality of instruction. Here, the board notes, the need is to broaden the scope. Certainly the service academies ought to be doing everything they can to get away from the chauvinistic and stereotyped thinking that too often is the curse of armed force leadership.

Strike Aftermath

Now that the agreement has been signed, miners will no doubt be streaming back to work this week, and the coal strike will soon be history. But recovery from the effects of the strike will not be instantaneous. Spokesmen for the coal industry warn that it may be two or three weeks before any considerable supplies of coal will reach empty bins. A week or 10 days will be required to get the steel industry operating at prestrike capacity. And it will be some time before freight and passenger service cut off by coal shortages can be restored.

To be sure, when coal supplies become adequate, some industries that have been forced to close down or curtail operations will be able to recoup their losses in whole or in part by speedups. The favorable reaction of the stock market to the news from the coal front was probably due largely to a conviction that the strike has not had a permanently depressing effect on business, but has rather resulted in an accumulation of orders insuring a high level of industrial activity for the immediate future. With consumer purchasing power still at high levels, there is good reason to anticipate a post-strike upturn of this kind

Nevertheless, it would be a great mistake to minimize the effect of the coal strike on output, profits and wages. Some of the damage is irreparable, and its long-range effects are incalculable. The wage losses suffered by strikers and furloughed workers will be reflected in reduced buying of consumer goods in many parts of the country for a long time to come. Moreover, the end of the coal strike does not spell the end of labor disputes. The plants of the Chrysler Corp., for instance, have been closed by a strike for six weeks. The company and its 89,000 employes are losing income that cannot be recaptured. Trouble is also brewing between the UAW and General Motors. The union is demanding wage increases and pension benefits entailing heavy additions to over-all production costs. A strike to enforce these demands, idling the employes of this industrial giant, would have serious repercussions. There is also the dismaying prospect of a telephone strike in the event that a settlement is not attained before the expiration of the current truce. Then there is the danger that the success of John L. Lewis in obtaining wage increases and larger payments into the UMW pension fund may give impetus to a general drive for wage increases and costly benefits.

With the national income at high levels and living costs fairly well stabilized for the time being, most business forecasters have predicted a sustained high level of business activity in the months immediately ahead, though opinions differ as to the long-range outlook. However, another general round of wage increases could easily disappoint such expectations, since it would inevitably result in a rise of prices. The end result would be higher living costs, new demands for compensating wage increases, and more costly strikes to enforce such demands. That is the road leading to the industrial depression that the country has so long feared and is hoping to avoid.

Rio Conference

American Ambassadors to South American nations will meet today in Rio de Janeiro for the second of the praiseworthy regional conferences held by Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr. The meeting is important because it will bring together the collective opinions and advice of American diplomatic representatives on the spot—something for which mere State Department cables are no substitute. There is plenty in the political field to discuss—how to encourage genuinely representative regimes such as those in Uruguay and Brazil and at the same time counter the developing trend toward totalitarian suppression in Colombia and the continued repressions of Peron in Argentina, both of which are legitimate concerns of the Pan-American community. In particular Peron's anti-newspaper campaign is disturbing. On the economic side the conference undoubtedly will deal with inducements to private investment through the growing medium of international treaties as well as with the necessity for more self-help as a prerequisite to aid under Point IV. One important thing the conference can do in this respect is to point up the significance of the meeting of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council to be held in Washington later this month. Whatever the Rio conference may emphasize, that emphasis will be in behalf of reaffirming the community of interests of the American Republics.

MANILA AT MIDNIGHT

The arms of darkness, great and silent lover,
Have left her where she lies.
Now for this once, beneath an argent cover,
Now that her passion dies,
My city dreams of stars, bright peace above her,
Bright peace upon her eyes.
My city sleeps. It is the witching hour:
Behold, the shadows stare
Upwards to where, on an old cathedral tower,
Rising like a prayer
Blossoms the twelve-times blooming midnight flower
Then withers into air . . .

"Lodge Advises GOP"

It seems to me that in your March 1 editorial commenting on Senator Lodge's article you unduly limit the extent to which the Republican Party, if returned to power, could reverse some of our present directions. For one thing, you ignore the tremendous power of an administration to sell its ideas through the press and neglect its ability to put through legislation not popular at the time, which proves, after enactment, to be not half so bad as its opponents claimed, viz. the Taft-Hartley Act. In short, an administration to a large extent creates and influences the popular will, and I see no reason why some of the Fair Deal measures could not be swept out.

I must agree, however, that the GOP, to win, must have a specific and constructive program, "obviously good for the country." May I suggest, as an example suggested by Peter Drucker's recent article in Harper's, an old age program based on providing work which old people can do, keeping them productive and happy, rather than the present pension mirage which will build an increasing population of the idle and discontented, an increasing drain on our production. Such a program would be conservatism at its best.

Government Leave

I was astonished to see that Senator Paul Douglas begrudges the Government employe his 26 days annual leave. If the Senator is seeking to cut down expenses in Government, it seems to me that there are many more fruitful areas.

Rather than cut down leave, I should like to see Government and private enterprise expand it. I should like to see men like Senator Douglas advocating three months' leave with pay annually and one year's leave with pay every seven. The American system of free enterprise, through progressive and efficient management and through the cooperation of labor, has so increased the productivity of the individual labor that his workday in the last century has been reduced by more than 60 percent. The astonishing recent increase in productivity of labor should make possible further reductions.

If labor will cooperate to eliminate featherbedding and support technological changes and if industry will take imaginative and progressive steps, we can today initiate the pattern of three months' annual leave and one year's leave every seven. When Ford announced his $5 day ($1600 annually), the national average was $500 a year. American enterprise proved worthy of Ford's faith and it is capable of an expanded leave program today.

"DP Liberalization"

It seems unbelievable that a newspaper of the calibre of The Washington Post should print an editorial so isolated from the real facts that any similarity to them is purely coincidental. I refer to the one of February 27, "DP Liberalization."

Perhaps the writer of that article is not aware that the expelled people he speaks of were not infiltrees of the lands from which they were driven. Is it infiltrating when people are called to transform a swampland into fertile territory, as the ancestors of some of these people were called for by Maria Theresia of Hungary more than two hundred years ago?

That is what was done to the 15 million hapless victims from the countries surrounding Germany, such as Silesia, Hungary, Austria, and parts of Yugoslavia. The expulsion of these people of German ethnic origin is the crime of the ages.

Truman and the Press

As a result of an exclusive interview granted by the President to Mr. Arthur Krock, the press has recently become exercised by the growing gulf between it and the President. Editorialists, rather surprisingly including Mr. Marquis Childs, have deplored this rift as symbolic of an isolation of the President from the people and from the main streams of thought in this country.

Remembrance of the 1948 election should be a sufficient indication whether it is the President or the press who is out of touch with what Americans think and believe. So long as the press reflects the views of a conservative, privileged minority, it cannot be very important whether the President or anyone else is separated from it by a gulf, however wide.

Transfer Of Sovereignty

Comes now a proposal for high level talks between chiefs of state seeking to stay the headlong race for armaments. May I suggest that another high level talk should come first; a talk between Mr. Truman, or Mr. Acheson, and the American people?

In that talk would it not be well for whichever gentleman who elects to be spokesman to ask the American people whether they are prepared to accept the thesis that real security can be obtained only under a regime of enforceable law between nations? Should he not say that the establishment of a world legal order means a transfer of certain sovereignty by the nation-state to the world instrument? Should he not tell the American people that it is up to them to decide whether they wish to accept such transfer of sovereignty, or whether they prefer to take their chances of defending themselves by force alone?

Is it not possible that with admission by a responsible head of state that treaties, leagues, pacts and alliances based on agreements, however formalized, are not enough, the American people might find their own suspicion of such fact verified? Should they not be told that talk, at no matter how high level, can only buy time and that unless their spokesman can speak with authority for them in such fundamental matters as the above, such time may only further jeopardize their present power potential?

This talk, it seems to me, must come first. For if it does not, neither Mr. Truman or Mr. Acheson at Moscow or wherever else will have anything substantially new to say.

Third Force In Asia

The most urgent problem facing mankind is how, vis-a-vis, the impasse and acute international schism, humanity can prevent war. The diplomatic behavior of the United States and the Soviet Union unfortunately has accelerated the tension; their relations and contact have reached a climax where any effective mobilization for peace under the leadership of either country has become practically impossible and unattainable.

The only hope for peace is the emergence of the Third Force, which will, in Walter Lippmann's words, "extricate itself from the Russian-American conflict." Symptoms of this movement are appearing gradually in all parts of the world.

In Asia the movements emanate fundamentally from the realization that international tension and the threats of war, hamper any progressive development, whether in the fields of economic and social reconstruction, or in the realm of political freedom and cultural contributions.

Undoubtedly the remnants of the colonial mentality whose thinking is less amenable to the revolutionary changes confronting Asia will attempt to obstruct the Third Force. They would rely on arms and economic help from the United States. They will set up themselves as champions of anticommunism. They will use the very logical but untrue argument to induce the State Department that the expectation of financial help would lure the people of Asia into fighting for the "West."

Also, the Communists in Asia are trying to direct the revolutionary pattern of Asia into orienting itself to Moscow. They, too, can lure the populace with promises of a better lot under a Communist regime. In many instances they appeal to nationalist sense of pride and say that economic betterment must not be by charity, but as a byproduct of effective and total economic and social organization.

In other words, the efforts to capture the Asiatics into supporting the sponsored regimes such as the army-backed clique of Pibul Songramm in Siam, or Bao Dai in Indo-China, or reactionary governments in the Arab world, or into supporting Communist policies in China, Ho Chi-Minh's Viet Nam, or the various recently tightened Communist parties in the Near East are but a reflection of the cold war and a real effort to break Asia from its center position again into a peripheral one.

The power of Asia's central position has been weakened in its potentialities. The Communist sweep of China has been the underlying factor. The important question is how could the remaining portions of Asia, if mobilized into an articulate Third Force, deter China from becoming totally crystallized into the Soviet orbit. It is my firm opinion that a Third Force movement in Asia will make China less amenable to the Soviet diplomatic scheme. The alternative, namely, that if Asia falls in the American bloc, its control thereof is practically impossible. The mere presentation of two alternatives in Asia is a disadvantageous proposition, strategically speaking, in the long run.

A Third Force in Asia with an active socialistic philosophy, will awaken the dormant forces in Europe and reinvigorate the European Socialist parties. This would relax the international crisis complex.

Matter of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Mr. Johnson's Untruths

AMONG OTHER gassy generalities, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson made the statement in his New York speech last week that "the United States is now making substantial gains toward the achievement of its goal of peace through strength." Leave aside other areas in which Johnson is weakening American strength. Consider the air alone.

The blunt truth is that, according to the judgment of the most competent aviation authorities in this country, the United States is now being provided with less than half the strength necessary, not to win a war, but to "prevent the loss of a war at at the outset of hostilities." This means simply that, despite smarmy assurances to the contrary, Johnsonian "economies" are now inviting nothing less than defeat in war. Moreover, the evidence clearly suggests that Johnson's subordinates know it.

Some days before his New York speech, Johnson held an anonymous press conference, in which he claimed that a "program of expansion" had "brought the Nation's offensive air arm up to the equivalent of the 70 groups" recommended by the Finletter Commission. In his signed report to Congress on his "economy" program he sharply reduced this claim. He asserted that the Air Force now has the "equivalent of 52½ groups."

CONTRAST THESE Johnsonian assertions with the testimony of Air Secretary Stuart Symington and his aides in secret session before the House Appropriations Committee. Symington (obviously with the Soviet atom bomb in mind) warned that the 70-group program envisaged in the Finletter report might well be too low. He then stated flatly, directly contradicting Johnson's claims, that the Air Force now has, not 70, or 52½, but "43 or 44" modern groups.

It is only possible to conclude that Johnson has been attempting to deceive the American people on the vital subject of air strength in being. Yet this is by no means all Johnson is doing. An Air Force—and the nation it must protect—stands or falls by the rate at which obsolescent planes are replaced by new, modern types. "We know," Symington testified, "that we cannot maintain a 48-group program from the standpoint of modern airplanes under the present amount of money being allocated for procurement." Maj. Gen. Frederick Smith then went on to spell out Symington's meaning. Under the level of procurement projected for fiscal 1951, he said, "in about 5 years we would have about 34 modern groups."

The whole subject of defense is technical and difficult, which is one reason why Johnson's deceptions have escaped detection for so long. The most accurate way of estimating replacement rates—and hence our strength in the air—is in terms of airframe weight, the weight of aircraft annually delivered to the Air Force. Figures are dull, but the figures quoted below are worth pondering.

The Finletter report, to which Johnson referred, recommended a minimum annual delivery to the Air Force of 56 million pounds of airframe weight by the end of 1949. The curve was to continue upward until the United States had a fully ready Air Force by 1952, this being the too optimistic estimate of the date when the Soviet Union would begin quantity stockpiling of atomic weapons.

The lowest estimate of needed annual airframe weight was given by the joint congressional aviation board, whose work paralellied that of the Finletter commission. After hearing the country's leading aviation authorities, this board devised what was called "Plan B." Plan B was the rock-bottom minimum recommendation for American air strength. It was frankly designed, not to permit the capacity of strong defense or continuing retaliation, but to provide just sufficient strength "to prevent the loss of a war upon the outset of hostilities."

Plan B called for annual procurement of 45 million tons of airframe weight for the Air Force. Now consider the Johnsonian "economy" program. For fiscal 1950, deliveries of airframe weight to the Air Force were permitted, not of 56 million pounds, but of 23.5 million pounds. Moreover, in the Johnsonian budget for 1951, projected deliveries are to be actually reduced by more than two million pounds, back close to the 1947 level of 21 million pounds.

WHAT THIS MEANS is quite obvious. Behind all Johnson's windy assurances that "we are alert to the dangers of our times," and are "girding our loins accordingly," there is not strength but weakness. We are not headed for "peace through strength." Instead, if the best aviation experts in the country are to be trusted, we are headed straight for disaster, straight to "the loss of a war upon the outset of hostilities."

There may be some mysterious reason why American air power must be whittled away in the year of Soviet mastery of atomic energy and the loss of China. There may be some mysterious reason why the richest country in the world is too poor to provide the strength required to prevent defeat in case of war. But if this is so, we should at least know what we are doing, and why. What is happening instead is that the official charged with responsibility for the defense of the United States is consistently and demonstrably deceiving the American people on a matter which intimately concerns the very survival of every one of us.

Today and Tomorrow

Electing A President

I.

[This is the first of three articles on the Lodge-Gossett Amendment to the Constitution (S. J. Res. 2) which passed the Senate on February 1, 1950, and is now before the House. If it is adopted by a two-thirds vote of the House, it must be ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the States within seven years of the date when it is submitted to them by Congress.

[This series of articles has been written in consultation with and on the basis of a memorandum prepared for me by Mr. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., of Princeton, N. J.]

Lippmann

THE PROPOSED amendment would make several changes in the method of electing the President and the Vice President. One would abolish the Electoral College and the presidential electors. But this does not mean that the President would be elected directly by popular vote. The essence of the existing system is retained: the choice would still be made by electoral votes, each State being entitled as now to as many electoral votes as it has Representatives and Senators combined.

Standing by itself this change is of little importance.

A SECOND provision would make the election definitive if a candidate has a plurality of at least 40 percent of the total electoral vote. At present, under the Twelfth Amendment, there is no election unless the candidate has a majority, and the choice is then thrown into the House.

The proposed amendment would reduce to an acceptable minimum the chance that the choice would not be decided in the popular election, and that the country would face the risk of a prolonged uncertainty while the House of Representatives elected a President.

THE THIRD provision deals with the situation that would arise if no candidate had a plurality of 40 percent and the election were thrown into the House. Under the Twelfth Amendment the vote in the House is by the unit rule. That is to say, each State casts one vote. This is obviously unfair to the larger States. The Lodge-Gossett Amendment would have the President and the Vice President chosen from the two leading candidates by a majority of the two houses sitting in a joint session.

This is an improvement on the Twelfth Amendment and, so far as we know, no serious objection to it has been raised by anyone. It should be noted, however, that no provision is made for the case where two candidates are tied with more than 40 percent of the electoral vote.

BUT THE fourth provision, which is the heart of the amendment, is very important and very controversial.

Under the existing system, which rests on State laws and on custom but not on the Constitution itself, all the electoral votes in each State are cast for the candidate who obtains a plurality of the popular vote in that State. This arrangement is known as the general ticket system. It was almost certainly never contemplated by the men who framed the Constitution. It was introduced by political leaders in some of the States to increase their own power, and as early as 1824 Senator Benton attacked it, saying that it was contrary to the intent of the Constitution that "each State should have a consolidated vote" rather than "each elector a separate vote."

THE DISADVANTAGES of the general ticket system are many and they are serious. The Lodge-Gossett Amendment is designed to remedy them. We believe, however, that the remedy is not the right remedy—that it has disadvantages at least as great, and probably greater, than those which it would remove, and that there is a better remedy. We dislike having to differ with Senator Lodge since we are in complete sympathy with his purposes. The reason we have to differ with him is that we are opposed to any recognition of the principle of proportional representation in the American system of government. We believe that it is the fatal error of European democratic constitutions, the great cause of their worst difficulties, and e think it no exaggeration to say that if the principle of proportional representation were introduced here, it would end by destroying the stability of the Government.

Senator Lodge would, we know, object as strongly as we do to proportional representation in the legislative branch of the Government. But he believes, and we do not, that it could be introduced into the system of electing the President without any serious danger that it would then spread to the legislature.

IN OUR succeeding articles we shall go into this more precisely in order to show, first, why Senator Lodge is right that the present general ticket system should be reformed—and second, why we think proportional representation is the wrong remedy and what the better remedy is.

Davis to Press Bid for $40,000 To Make Full Gaming Probe

the responsibility of the "proper authorities" concerned with police department discipline, Davis asserted.

That, obviously, leaves the matter to Major Barrett, superintendent of police, and the District Commissioners—Barrett's bosses.

Major Barrett last night said he had no comment to make. "I'm telling all the papers I have no statements," he asserted. Captain Richitt could not be reached.

"The committee," Davis said, "felt it important to get both sides in the open to air out the matter.

"We felt that whatever was produced would be made available to the proper authorities by the hearings; and that this would give the opportunity for the wheels to begin to turn.

By doing this, said Davis, the committee helped "put the situation into better shape.

"The press conference which Richitt gave"—(It took place last Thursday night: the first hearing on Richitt's statements were held Friday)—"created uncertainty in the mind of the man in the street as to what was going on, as to just what kind of 'corruption' was going on," said Davis.

He added that the committee not only is finished with Barrett and Richitt and their problem of discipline, but will hold no more hearings for "10 days to 2 weeks—at least."

This, he explained, is because Hyman I. Fischbach, counsel for the subcommittee, and others of the staff "have been working day and night since October and need some time off."

Fischbach is reported planning a Florida vacation.

Davis would not outline the subject of the committee's next hearings.

But he said the House group has only glossed over gambling in the District. The $40,000 he will attempt to obtain will be used to hire special investigators.

"The gambling situation," he said, "is something you can't investigate as you go along. It means an all-out investigation.

"It is kind of prying a turtle out of its shell.

"Now," he warned, "I'm not talking about sensations.

"I mean we have to get people in here—Joe Brown, and Bill Smith, and John Doe.

"We have to say, 'Now, look here, what do you know about this? Who's this person?'

"We have to get them in here and dig out the facts."

Apparently the subcommittee would question witnesses in closed, executive session in the early phase of an all-out probe.

The $40,000 can be granted by the House alone.

The same day Davis presented his resolution, the Senate Judiciary Committee approved the Kefauver resolution providing for a major investigation of organized interstate crime. Committee members said $100,000 would be the minimum such an investigation would require.

Davis last night emphasized his resolution and the Kefauver resolution are separate.

He said his committee has been spending the $10,000 granted it by the House last fall for personnel and office expenses. Not a cent, he said, has been spent by subcommittee members. The $40,000 would be needed for the gambling investigation alone.

The $100,000 for the interstate probe, Davis asserted, is low.

"I'm satisfied they can't take $100,000 and do what we have been doing. It would take a million, maybe more," he said.

One confusing point in Major Barrett's report on Captain Richitt's "misbehavior" was cleared up yesterday by Daniel B. Maher, author of the report.

In one particular, the report says Richitt was due to report December 12 from a leave, but failed to do so. In another, Barrett reports Richitt on "December 11" glared at Barrett when the two discussed proper uniforms for police on duty at Constitution Hall.

Maher said the December 11 date is incorrect; the date of the incident was probably Sunday, November 27, 1949.

Here's Item-by-Item Record Of D. C. Crime Inquiry on 'Hill'

In two confusing days last week—on a subject that came up unexpectedly—the House Subcommittee on Crime heard some startling charges about Washington's Police Department.

Point by point, these stood out:

Item: Emmitt Warring, the little man who cannot reveal his occupation on the ground—he asserts—that it "may tend to incriminate" him, reported he talked to three ranking Washington police officials.

They were, he told the committee, Inspector George Walldrodt, and Precinct Captains Beverly C. Beach and Anthony Richitt.

Item: Captain Richitt told a press conference that in a conversation he had with Warring over gambling arrests, Warring mentioned "The Boss;" identified "The Boss" as Maj. Robert J. Barrett, and claimed Barrett called him (Warring) over the telephone.

Captain Richitt made his "disclosure" to fight back at Major Barrett, superintendent of police, for transferring him from the "White House Precinct"—No. 3—to Precinct No. 8.

Item: Captain Beach, identifying Warring as a "gambler," said he met Warring at a Georgetown jewelry store. In reply to a question from Warring, Beach said, he told Warring he had had a complaint from Barrett concerning gambling in the Seventh Precinct. Warring, the captain said, replied, "I don't have anything in No. 7 and I don't believe there are any places in No. 7."

Item: Barrett denied any conversation with Warring, reputed kingpin of the District's gambling world, except to discuss a holdup in which Warring lost at least $20,000.

Item: Barrett said he ordered Richitt transferred as a disciplinary measure. Among Richitt's insubordinations, Barrett said, were overstaying a leave (at the 'little White House', Key West, Fla.); "glaring contempuously" at the police superintendent; not calling in hourly as required by police regulations.

Item: In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, there was only one arrest for gambling in Precinct No. 3—commanded by Richitt, and in No. 7—commanded by Beach.

While these matters of "contacts" and discipline within the department were the most dramatic topics, they have not been the only ones discusesd before the House committee in its month of hearings.

Three Categories

Broadly speaking, the other matters fall into three categories: police needs, legal needs, and vice activities.

As for police, the committee was told by witnesses that the department needs:

1. Six hundred and fifty more policemen.
2. Better pay and shorter hours.
3. A night Police Court.
4. Assignment of another United States commissioner in Washington.
5. Modernization of the police code, and a tighter "basic training" program for rookies.

Also along these lines, the procedure of the coroner's inquest was called outmoded, and an expert assigned to make an appraisal of the coroner's office.

Definite changes in District laws were requested, or at least suggested.

Major Barrett asked for a disorderly conduct law that would permit police to arrest and prosecute occupants of "dives." With the present laws, he asserted, his men can arrest but can't back up their arrests. Habitues put up forfeits which are also inadequate, he charged.

Cheap Gambling "Licenses"

United States Attorney George Morris Fay said the only way to clamp down on gambling is to impose jail terms that must be served. Fines for gambling offenses, he declared, are cheap "licenses" for gamblers. He wants legal loopholes plugged in several present laws.

Representative Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) of the subcommittee, announced he plans to sponsor legislation to cut drastically the number of persons with diplomatic immunity. Minor diplomatic employes, he asserted, have abused their rights. Traffic offenses are mainly involved.

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), chairman, suggested a more stringent law for habitual sex offenders. A "habitual criminal law," which would put constant offenders — including sex criminals—in prison for life, would be helpful, Davis said.

Mr. "XXX" Unidentified

Next to the Richitt-Barrett hearings of last week, the committee's "hottest"sessions have been on "Mr. XXX."

The employes of the unidentified "Mr. XXX" get discounts from bondsmen, the committee was told. A dozen and more bondsmen were called before the House group on this point.

Next to "Mr. XXX" the affairs and patrons of after-hours clubs drew attention.

Three police officials—one of them Captain Beach —testified some clubs are hangouts for "tarts," while others are scenes of hot crap games.

The secretary of one club told the committee it would be "surprised at the number of "Congressmen I got come up and get it (liquor) for nothing."

Chairman Davis last night reported he is "satisfied with the committee's progress.

"We have made great progress," Davis said.

Gaming Arrests Rose Sharply After July in No. 3 and No. 7

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Arrests for gambling misdemeanors in the Third and Seventh Precincts spurted suddenly after last July when Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, issued an order making precinct commanders responsible for controlling gambling in their precincts.

Statistics presented to the Davis Subcommittee investigating District crime showed 69 more arrests for gambling were made in the Third Precinct the last six months of 1949 than had been made in the precinct for the whole 10 years prior to July, 1948.

Reports also showed Seventh Precinct stepped up enforcement of gambling during the latter months of 1949.

The reports were compiled for presentation to the subcommittee by Capts. Anthony Richitt and Beverly Beach of th Third and Seventh Precincts respectively. Both captains were principal figures in the subcommittee's crime probe last week. They made the reports after the subcommittee questioned the lack of gaming arrests in the two precincts.

The increase in arrests after July, however, contrasts sharply with the lack of cases made during the fiscal year July 1, 1948 through June 30, 1949. During this period, the reports showed each precinct made only one arrest for gambling misdemeanors.

Before Barrett's order on gambling to precinct commanders, policing of gambling in precincts had been left to the headquarters vice squad.

Barrett's order of last July 14 was aimed to stimulate more vigorous antigambling activity throughout the Police Department.

The superintendent submitted a summary of gambling arrests for the fiscal years 1938 to 1948 inclusive, disclosing that No. 3 Precinct arrested a total to 196 persons on gaming misdemeanors and 184 on felonies.

At the superintendent's request, Captain Richitt gave him a report dated February 13 covering Third Precinct antigambling enforcement from July 1, 1949 to January 1, 1950. The summary shows a total of 269 persons were arrested without warrants on misdemeanor charges either of participating in games r on disorderly conduct charges "as result of the games."

During the same 6-month period, five were arrested with warrants on multiple gambling and vice charges, some misdemeanors and some felonies. Thirty-six premises within Richitt's precinct were raided.

Police exhibits on committee files show this gambling enforcement picture at the Seventh Precinct.

Between July 1, 1938 and July 1, 1948 there were 32 gaming misdemeanor arrests and 42 felony arrests. One arrest for a gambling misdemeanor was executed in the year ended July, 1949.

Since that time, Captain Beach similarly reported to Barrett that since last July 1: "A private club then known as the Town and Country Club, 3135 K st. nw., was raided July 18 by Lieut. Roy Blick and the Vice Squad. Five slot machines were seized; no arrests were made.

He (Captain Beach) raided on September 29 "the premises of 2992 M st. nw., where Vincent A. Marino and Frank Miller both were arrested for violation of gambling laws. Both were convicted in Police Court.

He listed two other places in his precinct "suspected" of violating gaming laws and concluded his one-page summary with the comment: "These are the only places in this precinct concerning which I have received authentic complaints and to my knowledge from information received there is no full-scale gambling operation in this precinct."

Three Federal Units Prepare New Antiracketeering Laws

Justice, Treasury and FCC attorneys are preparing drafts of new Federal anti-racketeering laws. Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said yesterday.

The drafts are "in conformity with the suggestions" made at the one-day national crime conference held in Washington last month.

The "suggestions" at that conference included proposals to ban interstate shipments of slot machines and forbid the use of interstate telephone, telegraph and radio facilities for transmitting horse race betting information.

The announcement did not indicate specifically what particular legislation is being drafted.

McGrath said that the legislative committee of the crime conference, headed by Baltimore's Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro, will meet here March 16 and 17. The mayor named several subcommittees, including one on Federal legislation. This is headed by Pittsburgh's Mayor David Lawrence and includes several Federal officials.

Civitans to Hear Bish

Charles E. Bish, chairman of the health and education committee of the District Tuberculosis Association and principal of McKinley High School will speak on the problem of tuberculosis at the Tuesday luncheon of the Civitan Club at 12:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel.

Bloodmobile Unit Planning 3 Stops During the Week

The Red Cross bloodmobile will visit three communities in nearby Virginia and Maryland this week.

The schedule calls for trips to the Winchester (Va.) Presbyterian Church on Tuesday from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m.; the American Legion Service Building at Berryville, Va., on Wednesday from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., and Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium, Rockville, Md., on Thursday from 2 p. m. to 6 p. m.

The Washington Regional Blood Center last week distributed a total of 569 pints of blood to hospitals in the District and nearby States, the District Red Cross Chapter said. Of the total, 376 pints went to District hospitals; 91 to Maryland; 73 to Virginia and 29 to West Virginia.

Argentine Drought Ends

Buenos Aires, March 5 (AP).—Drought-stricken Argentina had heavy rains this weekend. Four and a half inches of rain was recorded in Buenos Aires in a 48-hour period.

Board Votes Dismissal of 3 Policemen

Dismissal of three Metropolitan Police privates from the force was recommended yesterday by a police trial board.

Evidence on charges against the three was heard Friday by the board, which included Inspector Robert Pearce and Capts. Lorraine Johnson and Howard Covell.

The three defendant policemen are Walter G. Kelly and Raymond R. Camden of the Thirteenth Precinct, and William I. Conway of the Eleventh Precinct. All three were charged with failing to patrol beats, drinking on duty, and conduct prejudicial to the department. Kelly and Camden also were charged with failing to perform assigned duties. All three are suspended.

NCAA Spurns Kentucky for NC State, Rupp Burns

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

ORLANDO, FLA., MARCH 5.—On at least one count, Bucky Harris has found managing the Nats to be preferable to managing the Yankees. With Washington, Harris gets the $25 per week expense money alloted all the players during spring training. The Yanks don't include their managers in the dole . . . George Zaharias, 270-pound spouse of Babe Didrikson, barely missed getting into the championship flight of the recent Florida two-ball invitation tournament with his girl partner. Zaharias played the majority of his shots without removing his big cigar . . . The only concession he made was when he was putting. Then Big George compromised by holding his cheroot in one of his putting hands while he stroked the ball . . . To hear Buck Newsom tell it, Clark Griffith advised him not to accept the job of broadcasting the Browns' games this year, hinting broadly that Newsom would be given a Washington contract . . . It could happen, if the Washington pitching staff gets off to a sour start, which could happen what with Ray Scarborough the only member with an impressive record . . . Backers of Oil Capitol can reflect that only two of the 20 colts that were winners of the Flamingo Stakes ever raced home first in the derby.

POVICH

THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA divorced the school's football operations from the athletic treasury funds and paid Coach Bob Woodruff a salary from two sources, thus getting around the State law that forbids a coach to be paid more than the $12,000 salary of the college president . . . Woodruff was given a $17,500 contract for seven years . . . How do you get a tryout with a major league ball club? Listen: Mike Martin, Nats' scout, was taking a cab to the station in Washington three years ago. The cab driver recognized him, asked "Why don't you look me over?" Martin invited his chauffer to work out at Griffith Stadium the following week, signed him to a Charlotte contract. At Charlotte last season, Diz Sutherland won 18 games, lost only 10, and is now in the Nats' camp . . . The powerful dog-racing interests in Florida are keeping night harness racing out of the State with their lush fighting fund and political ties. The Yankees may not have been smart in insisting Dick Wakefield take a pay cut. It's traditional that traded players aren't cut, and that sort of tampering with Wakefield's temperament could leave him permanently disgruntled.

EZZARD CHARLES' challenge to Joe Louis in Ebony Magazine in which he dares the retired champion to "come out and fight," doesn't sound like the old Charles. A year ago he wanted no part of Louis, whom he called "my idol." . . . Mickey Grasso, the Nats' rookie catcher from Seattle, brings comforting news to American League pitchers who will be confronted by Big Luke Easter of the Cleveland Indians. Despite Easter's tremendous socking in the Coast league, Grasso says, "he can be pitched to. Against our club he made only three hits all season." . . . The Brooklyn Dodgers, at their Vero Beach camp, have the last word in pitching machines. It throws curves . . . The MacGregor Co., demonstrating the liveliness of its golf balls, wheeled a driving machine onto the first tee of Orlando's Dubsdread course and knocked dozens of balls on the first green, 270 yards away, on the fly . . . Jackie Jensen, Yankee rookie from California U. where he was an All-American football player, boasts one of the strongest throwing arms in their camp, refuting the belief that football players become too muscle-bound to throw well.

WHEN CLARK GRIFFITH was pitching, the batter who hit him with the most regularity was Nap Lajoie. The season-end averages showed Lajoie batted .450 against Griff, who complained to Pitcher Jack Dunn that Lajoie had his number. Dunn told Griffith how to pitch to Lajoie. "I believed him until I took another look at the averages and saw where Nap had an average of .540 against Dunn for the season," said Griff . . . Billy Martin, the Yanks' second baseman from Oakland whom Manager Casey Stengel knew as "the fellow with a schnozz bigger than mine," flabbergasted Stengel when he reported at St. Petersburg. Martin had undergone a plastic job, leaving Stengel with the undisputed title . . . Hank Greenberg, who threatens to eject noisy hecklers from Cleveland's park, complained last year about a leather-lunged Philadelphia fan who was heaping abuse on the Indians. He investigated, and learned the fellow was employed by his father-in-law, Gimbel's of Philadelphia. The Cleveland rookie pitcher, Hal Saltzman, is a protege of Tommy Bridges, who sent him to the Indians' camp with the advice: "Don't let anybody teach you anything about pitching there except Mel Harder. He's the best."

BOBO SAYS NO, NO—Bobo Newsom may be in the minor leagues, but still wants major league pay for his pitching services. Here he gives Joe Engel, Chattanooga Lookouts president, an icy "no sale" reaction as Engel offers him a 1950 contract. Bobo is working out with the Nats at Orlando, Fla., and is trying to talk his way back to the Griffs. So far, he's failed

Wildcats Immediately Grab Bid to Invitational

New York, March 5 (AP).—Defending Champion Kentucky was by-passed today and North Carolina State was chosen to represent District 3 in the NCAA basketball tournament, opening March 23.

The Southern Conference titlists were picked after the Kentucky Wildcats, champions of the Southeastern Conference, refused to settle the issue in a playoff, according to the NCAA.

Coming up with a different version of the situation, Kentucky, fourth ranked nationally, accepted a bid immediately to play in the New York Invitational. They were eliminated in the first round last year.

At Lexington, Ky., an irate Coach Adolph Rupp, said Kentucky received no invitation from the NCAA to meet North Carolina State in a playoff for District 3 representation in the NCAA Basketball Tournament.

"No One Consulted Us"

"No one on the committee (District 3 Section Committee) or from the NCAA consulted us about a playoff," he said.

The selection was announced through NCAA headquarters by Gus K. Tebell of the University of Virginia, chairman of the Third District selection committee.

Kentucky, defending NCAA champion, and North Carolina State were the two teams considered prominently by the committee, Tebell said. Their records were virtually identical and, considering respective scores, strength of opposition and other factors, it was impossible to make an outright selection, the chairman said.

N. C. State Agrees

He declared that consequently the committee recommended that a playoff be held between the two teams to determine which should represent the district.

"North Carolina State agreed to play Kentucky any place at any time," Tebell said. "However, Kentucky declined to meet North Carolina State in a playoff, and the Wildcats asked to be selected outright. The committee felt that under those circumstances North Carolina State should be selected."

Rupp said Tebell, was a guest of the Southern Conference tournament which was won last night by N. C. State.

"It seems he should have looked at us, too, if he were going to cast a ballot," he added.

[Tebell, basketball coach at the University of Virginia, said he had asked Rupp two weeks ago if Kentucky would be interested in meeting N. C. State in a playoff game and Rupp declined.

Tebell Denies "Guest" Charge

[Tebell, who saw N. C. State win its fourth conference championship over the weekend, denied the charge by Rupp that he was the guest of N. C. State at the Durham (N. C.) tournament.

["I paid $9 to see the tournament, paid my hotel bill and was definitely not the guest of anyone but myself," he said. "The committee thought N. C. State would give District 3 ample representation in the NCAA tournament, and that's why we selected that team.

["Kentucky and N. C. State were so close, the committee thought a playoff advisable. Kentucky refused, asking to be chosen outright."]

The selection committee is made up of Tebell, Edmund M. Cameron of Duke University and Roy Mundorff of Georgia Tech. Mundorff replaced Rupp temporarily on the committee after Rupp's resignation to let the committee consider Kentucky.

Rupp Proud of Record

"What does a team have to do to receive a bid?" Rupp challenged yesterday.

"The sports writers of America picked us up as the superior team of the district. It is regrettable that some members of the committee apparently haven't been reading the papers.

"We defeated Bradley, the No. 1 team of the Nation. We defeated Villanova on a neutral floor and Villanova defeated North Carolina State on State's home floor. We've lost one less game than State and we have played a much superior schedule.

"I would like very much to know on what basis the committee chose North Carolina State."

North Carolina State has a record of 24 victories and five defeats, including a victory in the Southern Conference tournament over the weekend. The Wolfpack beat Duke in the finals, 67-47.

Kentucky's record was 25-4, also including a sweep through the Southeastern tournament at Louisville. The Wildcats whipped Tennessee 95-58 in the last round.

The Sawyer Story

The Professor Is In A Class by Himself

By Harry Robert

EDITOR'S NOTE: The author of these articles has covered baseball in Philadelphia for many years as a newspaper writer and radio commentator:

I WAS IN NO DOUBT as to the vocation of the graying, portly, soft-spoken gentleman in the conservative salt-and-pepper suit who sat across from me at the luncheon table.

His language was proper and precise without being prissy, as he discussed the newer methods of teaching biology. Once or twice he illustrated a point with a scientific reference. The mention of Mendel's Law came as naturally as the flutter of an autumn leaf drifting down upon a campus.

No question about it. The fellow was a college professor.

I was in no doubt as to the vocation of the graying, portly not-so-soft-spoken gentleman in the gaudy white suit with red and blue trimmings who stood in the third-base coaching box in Shibe Park, Philadelphia.

His language as he clapped his hands together and yelled to a batter 90 feet away was slightly on the raucous side. He was advising the young man with a bat on his shoulder to "smack it a mile."

SAWYER

No question about it. The fellow was manager of a major league baseball team.

The college professor at the luncheon table and the majjor league manager in the bespangled monkey suit were one and the same

He was Prof. Edwin Melby Sawyer, B. S., M. S., late of Ithaca College, New York. He was also Manager Eddie Sawyer of the Philadelphia Phillies.

PROFFESOR-MANAGER SAWYER is the phenomenon of phenomenons in the great American game—an authentic college professor running a major league baseball team. Mr. Sawyer was associate professor in the science department of Ithaca College from 1937 through 1943. He taught classes in biology, zoology and physiology.

He is the first—perhaps the last and only—college professor to become the manager of a major league baseball club.

Ring Lardner and Charles E. Van Loan never dared dream up such a character in their zany baseball fiction.

I don't believe half the Phillies players or more than three or four of the other 15 major league managers are fully aware of Manager Sawyer's distinction. For Edwin Melby Sawyer does not throw his professorial weight around.

But he threw his baseball weight around in 1949, his first full season in the big show. He brought the Phillies home in third place at season's end. He scared the daylights out of the pennant-winning Dodgers, whipping them next to the last day and sending them into extra innings the final day of the season before they managed to squeak through.

It was the most impressive showing the cellar-dwelling Phils had made since 1917, when they finished second under that extremely unprofessorial manager, Pat Moran.

PROF. SAWYER'S Bachelor of Science degree was earned at Ithaca College and his Master's degree is from Cornell. He was only a year and a half away from a Ph.D. when he left the ivy-clad towers of higher learning for the baseball fields of higher earning.

Sawyer is not only the first major league manager who was a college professor. He was also the first college professor who spent his spare time playing professional baseball. During his six years of professorship, he was away from Ithaca College from spring until fall playing for or managing minor league teams.

Once a fellow professor asked Sawyer to explain his strange interest in the plebeian pastime of whacking a small white pellet around an arena peopled by yelling, shirt-sleeved fans.

"Well," replied Prof. Sawyer, "I have to play baseball in the summer so I can earn enough money to afford to teach in the winter."

DR. LEONARD BLISS JOB, president of Ithaca College since 1932, has known Prof. Sawyer since the Phillies' manager was a freshman.

"Mr. Sawyer is a man of high ideals and many other admirable qualities," says Dr. Job. "I remember him as an undergraduate student. Even then he was a leader in the student body. He made an excellent academic record before he became a member of our faculty.

"We feel sure his success was due in part to the influence of a young woman named Polly Bassett. Polly was a tiny person with much vitality and an urge to high achievement. She has since become Mrs. Sawyer.

"Sawyer got along well after his graduation in his work with students in his classes."

Prof. Laurence H. Hill, head of Ithaca's Science Department when Sawyer taught there, was as enthusiastic as President Job.

"Eddie taught biological sciences and coached from 1937 to '43," said Prof. Hill. "His ability to impart knowledge was unusual. He had a phenomenal memory and was a great detailist. His attention to detail, his warm personality, his memory and his teaching were of tremendous value to us while he was here."

Prof. Sawyer in his youth must have been almost as capable a ball player as he was a teacher. In 1933, playing outfield for Malone, N. Y., in a league of summer resort towns, he was signed for the Syracuse, N. Y., March 5 (AP).—The Syracuse Nationals took over the lead in the last six minutes to defeat the Minneapolis Lakers, 84-75, in a National Basketball Association game tonight.

George Mikan's 29 points gave him an unofficial total of 1738 points for a professional scoring record for one season.

Harris Thinks He Can Help Coan Hit .300

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 5.—Gil Coan, the Nats' notable three-time failure, again is due back in a Washington training camp and will find himself with a new mentor—Bucky Harris.

The one-time batting champion of the Southern Association who was a flop under Washington Managers Ossie Bluege and Joe Kuhel is being given a fourth shot at an outfield job by Harris.

The restoration of Coan to something resembling a good hitter is one of Harris' special missions in the Washington camp, taken on at the request of Owner Clark Griffith who has never lost his faith in Coan even in the face of the fellow's .217 average of last year.

"When he first came to us, he looked like a natural hitter, but he couldn't field," said Griffith. "Clyde Milan did a tremendous job in making him one of the good outfielders of the league. Now Harris will get him squared away with his hitting, I hope."

Harris, who likes to talk in metaphors, was saying today "I'm going to give Coan his shot at the white alley. Maybe I can help his hitting, and if I can we'll have a fine ball player. He can do everything else."

No powerful hitter himself when he was one of the top infielders in the league, Harris was nevertheless recognized as one of the smart hitters. "I had to be thinking while I was at the plate, or I would not have hit .125," said Harris modestly.

Harris' first move with Coan is entailing psychology. He's telling Gil that they are regarding him as the regular left fielder of the club, and that he won't have to worry about his job.

Coan will be used in a first-line outfield otherwise comprised of Sam Mele and Rookie Irv Noren. Despite Eddie Stewart's acceptance of terms and his expected presence in camp any day, Harris will keep him in reserve. He's gambling for higher stakes than Stewart's .284 hitting average.

As Harris reckons it, all three of his Coan-Mele-Noren trio are potential .300 hitters, and all of them could be on the power side.

Mele's .242 average with the

S. C. Wrestlers Open Tourney

Some 70 Southern Conference wrestlers will struggle for individual honors and the team title in the loop's annual wrestling tournament at College Park today and Tuesday.

Defending champion Washington and Lee looms as the pretourney favorite.

Stiffest competition is expected to come from V. M. I.

Duke, the Citadel and Maryland, the host team, also will have strong entries.

The preliminaries will start at 3:30 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. today, with the finals and semifinals getting under way at the same time on Tuesday.

Officials for the two afternoon and evening sessions will be Carl Kitt, plebe wrestling coach at the Naval Academy, and Lieut. Col. Austin Bishop of the Virginia Military Institute.

American U. Wants to Play For D. C. Basketball Title

American University challenges George Washington's or any other team's claim to the mythical District basketball championship and is itching for a chance to play for the honor.

"Let's have a tournament this week with all teams concerned and settle it," Coach Staff Cassell of the newly crowned Mason-Dixon Conference champs, suggested last night.

"Put us in a tournament with George Washington, which thinks it is the District champ; Georgetown, Maryland and C. U. and let's smoke this thing out," he added. "We can hold it at the American gym, we'll donate the gym, and make it official."

Max Farrington, Colonial athletic director, dimissed Cassell's suggestion this way:

"Basketball season ends at George Washington with the close of the Southern Conference tournament. Each year we receive bids to play post-season games and have turned them down. This latest invitation isn't the sort to make us jump at the opportunity.

"When we think we want to play American University, or any other school, we shall invite them and that's that. Our basketball coach, Bill Reinhart, is also our baseball coach and must get down to baseball practice immediately."

Cassell, waging a fight to have his American U. team and Catholic University crash the District's collegiate basketball hierarchy—GW, Georgetown and Maryland—made progress this winter when Georgetown played American University. Georgetown won, 68-63.

Segura Says He'll Quit Tour

Atlanta, March 5 (AP).—Pancho Segura said today he is quitting his tennis tour at the end of the month because fellow player Frankie Parker is making more money.

Segura, who has beaten Parker 65 times and lost 12, told Atlanta Constitution Sportswriter Gene Asher that his decision to quit the Bobby Riggs tennis tour was "definite."

TD Club Honors Past Presidents

The Touchdown Club honors its past presidents at a weekly luncheon today, 12:30 p. m.

Among those on hand will be: Lewis W. Thomas, Bob Simmons, Ralph D. Pittman, Max Farrington, Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, Donald H. Adams, Hugh (Bingo) Flynn, Admiral Emory S. Land (retired), Leonard P. Walsh and Bernard L. (Dutch) Eberts.

Pat Thomas, Dynamite Fight Tonight

Pat Thomas and Little Dynamite, a pair of up and coming featherweights, are featured on tonight's boxing card at Turner's Arena.

Thomas, eyeing a chance to fight in New York, will meet New Jersey's Freddie Smith. Dynamite will go against Johnny Lemons of New York. Dynamite has lost only one of his 19 professional bouts and will be gunning for his second straight triumph over Lemons. Dynamite won a split decision two weeks ago.

The two are making bids for the District featherweight championship, currently held by Jimmy Cooper.

An eight-round middleweight fight pits Roland Randall against Johnny Hansbury. Randall, from southeast, has lost only 2 of 11 matches while Hansbury, from the northwest, numbers the late Lavern Roach among his victims.

Another local boy, Sam Kelsey, takes on New Yorker Harry Fields in a scheduled six-rounder. Kelsey recently knocked out Joe Harris in the first round in Pittsburgh.

An opening four brings together Billy Hickerson of Washington and Jimmy O'Brein of Baltimore. First bout is 8:45.

Lamon, Ishman Picked On All-Star Team

Baltimore, March 5 (AP).—American University and Loyola College each placed two men today on the annual all-Mason-Dixon Conference basketball team.

The fifth was Nick Scallion, Washington College sharpshooter who broke one conference scoring record and almost touched another one.

Bob Lamon and Leroy Ishman of American and Bob Anderson and Mike Zedalis of Loyola with Scallion were picked as the best in the loop by the coaches in the conference.

Bedenk Quits As Football Coach At Penn State

State College, Pa., March 5 (AP). Joe Bedenk resigned today as head football coach at Pennsylvania State College, but he will remain at State as baseball coach.

Bedenk, line coach for 20 years, was elevated to the head coach's job last year after Bob Higgins asked to be relieved of the post because of ill health. Higgins had directed Penn State football for 19 years.

Baseball Stuff

Cochrane's Varsity Routs A's Scrubs, 10-2

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 5 (AP).—Mickey Cochrane's varsity trounced Bing Miller's scrubs, 10-2, today in the Philadelphia Athletics first intra-squad practice game of the season.

Bob Dillinger, the A's new third baseman, had three singles in four trips to the plate and Elmer Valo, veteran outfielder, had a perfect day, getting three for three.

Pitcher Phil Marchildon, attempting a comeback, showed his oldtime form in facing seven men and allowing no hits. The one runner reaching base during his turn on the hill made it on Dillinger's error.

Hitting heroes were Red Stallcup and Marvin Rackley. Stallcup cracked out a two-run homer in the fourth and Rackley's single in the seventh drove in the two winning runs.

The Lambs got only four hits off Ken Raffensberger, Frank Smith, Moe Savaransky and Jim Avrea.

Browns Have 3 Holdouts

Burbank, Calif., March 5 (AP). Pitchers Joe Ostrowski and Tommy Fine arrived at the St. Louis Browns' training camp today—leaving the three holdouts, Frank Gustine, Jack Graham and Al Widmar, as the only absentees.

Braves' Young Hurlers Show Well in 1-0 Game

Bradenton, Fla., March 5 (AP). Coach Johnny Cooney's lineup defeated Jimmy Brown's forces, 1-0, in the Boston Braves' first intra-squad practice game today before a deadhead 3000 crowd.

Each side used a pitcher an inning and the Cooney's countered against Righthander Bob Hall in the first inning when Gene Mauch doubled and Jack Daniels singled. Bases on balls were not called during the informal tilt, during which several of the Tribesmen's rookie pitchers displayed impressive stuff.

Waitkus Outhits Rival Dick Sisler

Clearwater, Fla., March 5 (AP). The battle between Eddie Waitkus and Dick Sisler for the first base job with the Philadelphia Phillies blossomed into a real struggle today as the Dusty Cookes defeated the Benny Bengoughs, 6-1, in the first intra-camp game.

Waitkus, playing first base for the Cookes, made three hits in three times at bat—one a slashing two-bagger along the right field line. Sisler, in the Bengough lineup, made two hits in three times up, his long double to left in the second inning scoring his team's only run.

Swift, Evers Homer

Lakeland, Fla., March 5, (AP). Outfielder Hoot Evers and Catcher Bob Swift shared hitting honors today as the Detroit Tigers went through their second day of batting drills.

Swift hit two home runs over the left field wall. Evers preceded him with one long blast to become the first player to hit a ball out of the park in the current training drills.

Rookies' Circuit Clouts Fetaure Giants' Game

Phoenix, Ariz., March 5 (AP).—Eddie Stanky piloted his varsity squad to an eight-inning 5-4 victory over Bill Rigney's yearlings in the first scrub game of the New York Giants' training camp here this afternoon. A crowd of 3600 watched the contest.

Despite a blistered right heel, Stanky played the full eight innings, collecting a double and two singles.

Homers were scattered by rookies Jack Harshman and Ken Washington.

Chandler Will Welcome Evidence In Pettit Case

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (AP). Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler said today he would welcome any evidence on the Paul Pettit case or any other matter involving baseball.

Chandler was informed of a New York Herald Tribune copyright story by Sports Editor Bob Cooke appearing in today's paper, claiming the $100,000 deal by which Pittsburgh acquired Pitcher Pettit through a Hollywood agent was "illegal."

Cooke's article said the Pirates conspired to sign the sensational schoolboy lefthander from Lomita, Calif., before he graduated from high school in January.

Carpenter Team Wins In Casting

Tom Carpenter's score of 91 led his team to victory in the Wilson High School casting tournament yesterday at the Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show at the National Guard Armory. Other members of the winning team were John Jerett (86), Hayden McMurray (84), Bob Dedrick (83), and John Wise (81). The casters used five-eighths ounce bait for accuracy.

The winning team was presented a trophy by Spencer Money, president of the National Capital Casting Club. The victors were coached by Cliff Netherton, vice president of the National Capital Casting Club.

Bill Tutt and Gregory Sexton, each with a 96, was high man in the first day of competition in the casting club's elimination tournament. Survivors of the tourney will represent Washington in an intercity match with Hagerstown, Harrisburg, Patterson and Norfolk on Saturday. Competition will be in fly and bait casting.

Other scores were: Harvey Irwin (95), Tom Neal (95), Jack Browning (93), Dick Ward (92), Ed Cunningham (90), Fletcher Rawls (86), Fred Brady (83) and L. C. Warnock (81).

Competition in the tournament will continue through the week at the Armory.

Maryland Starts Football Practice

Spring football practice begins at Maryland Tuesday, but only for aspirants from the 1949 frosh squad and any students who want to try out for the team.

Coach Jim Tatum said off-season practice for the varsity squad wouldn't start until March 20. Practice actually begins today, but players won't take the field until tomorrow. This afternoon will be devoted to issuing equipment.

Sam Snead Finishes 7 Shots Back

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5 (AP).—Jack Burke won the St. Petersburg Open golf title today.

The curley-haired young pro from White Plains, N. Y., matched yesterday's 69 for a 72-hole total of 272—12 under par.

Chick Harbert of Northville, Mich., who was tied with Burke at the three-quarters mark, got around in just 70 strokes—one under par for the 6285-yard Pasadena course and finished second with 273.

Toby Lyons of Warren, Pa., was one stroke farther back at 274.

All three were better than Pete Cooper's winning 275 on this same course last year, but Ben Hogan still holds the tournament record on his 269 at the shorter Sunset course.

Lyons made the most spectacular shot of the day, an ace on the 170-yard fifteenth hole. It put him in a good spot to win or tie Burke who already had finished but the tournament pressure was too much for the Pennsylvania lad. He played the last three holes two strokes over par.

Harbert too had a chance for a tie, coming to the 484-yard eighteenth hole in need of an eagle three to make it. The long-driving veteran was on the green in two, then his 18-foot putt just eased by the hole. He had to be satisfied with second-place money.

Sam Snead, top money winner of the year, shot a three under par 68 for a 279.

Jimmy Demaret of Oaji, Calif., wound up with 67 for 281.

SAWYER—From Pg. 10.

The Professor Is In A Class by Himself

New York Yankees by Scout Paul Krichell. That made him ineligible for college athletics his last two years.

He went to training camp with the Yanks in 1935. Then he knocked around the minors for two years, with Binghamton in the Eastern League, Newark in the International and Oakland in the Pacific Coast League.

At Oakland, in 1937, he injured his shoulder making somersault catch in center field. That, plus an old fotball knee injury, practically finished the professor as an active player.

He played part of 1938 at Binghamton. In 1939 he was manager of Amsterdam, N. Y., in the Canadian-American League. Amsterdam won the pennant. In 1940 his team came in third but won the playoff.

He managed Norfolk, Va., in 1941, Binghamton in 1942 and '43.

All this time he taught at Ithaca during the winter months.

After 1943 he switched to the Philadelphia National League "farm" organization. He was paid a salary large enough so he could afford to give up his professorship. Sawyer was the first "farm club" manager hired for the Phils by the late Herb Pennock, then general manager of the club.

Sawyer managed Utica, a Phillies "farm" in the Eastern League, four seasons. He was moved up to the top farm club, Toronto of the International League, in 1948. He was there only half the season when Ben Chapman was fired as manager of the Phils.

The science professor with the retentive memory was brought up to take charge of the parent club. In nine years as a minor league manager, Sawyer's teams won three pennants and two playoff championships. They finished out of the first division only twice. The professor was making good in a strange business.

Tomorrow—Manager Sawyer tells how he applies the methods of teaching to the management of a big league ball club.

N. C. State's Ranzino Tops Tourney Team

Durham, N. C., March 5 (AP).—Sammy Ranzino, followed up his record breaking performance in the Southern Conference tournament with a clean sweep in the all-star team voting of newsmen covering the event.

The cat-like Gary (Ind.) junior was a unanimous choice for first team honors on all 41 ballots. The vote was conducted by the Southern Conference Sports Writers Association during last night's championship game in which Ranzino led North Carolina State to a 67-47 victory over Duke. He scored 31 points last night for a three-game tournament record of 69.

FIRST TEAM
Sam Ranzino, N. C. State, 205.
Stan Najeway, Wake Forest, 197.
Ed McMillan, William and Mary, 170.
Dick Dickey, N. C. State, 168.
Corron Youmans, Duke, 163.

SECOND TEAM
Paul Horvath, N. C. State, 122.

Davion Allen, Duke, 110.
Jack Mueller, Wake Forest, 98.
Vic Bubas, N. C. State, 77.
Bill Fleming, Duke, 59.

(Places on the team were assigned according to total points in the voting, irrespective of position. This accounts for one guard, McMillan, and four forwards making up the first five.)

Harris Hopes To Make Coan .300 Hitter

Nats last year after he was obtained from the Red Sox is deceiving, as Harris views it. "They tell me he was bothered by back trouble until the last month of the season, and then he was the best hitter on the club. He began to show power and hit all of his three home runs in the last two weeks."

Tinker Field began to take on more of a big league atmosphere with Third Baseman Eddie Yost and Second Baseman Al Kozar joining the squad today, in addition to Outfielders Coan and Clyde Vollmer . . . Little George Genovese who came to the club as a shortstop, lost little time moving into action at second base where Harris has asked him to take over in the spring workouts . . . Steve Nagy, the chunky southpaw from the Coast League, is being groomed for one of the starting pitching jobs along with Ray Scarborough, Sid Hudson, Dick Welk, Joe Haynes and Dick Welteroth.

Smith, Partner Win Net Doubles

Palm Beach, Fla., March 5.—C. Alphonso Smith of Washington, D. C., and Raymond Kunkel of this city won the Bath and Tennis Club men's doubles championships by defeating Spencer Love and John Van Ryan of this city, 6—3, 6—4, this afternoon.

Corcoran Urges Medal-Match Play

Miami Beach, Fla., March 5 (AP). A campaign to make all match play golf tournaments medal-match play events was outlined here today by Fred Corcoran, tournament director of the Ladies' PGA and editor of the Official Golf Guide.

Corcoran said he planned to poll leading golf professionals this week on their reaction to the proposal and hoped eventually to have all golf tournaments on medal play basis.

Wins 1st Half Title

Georgetown Branch defeated Del-Ray, 51-49, yesterday to win the first half championship of the Washington Boys' Clubs' varsity class league. The teams finished their first half schedule with 5-1 records.

Chuck Baumann paced the winners with 10 points while Billy Rorer's 14 points paced the losers.

St. Martin's Wins

St. Martin's won the first half title of the Catholic Youth Organization's Girl's Intermediate Basketball League by defeating Blessed Sacrament, 41-37, in a playoff yesterday on the winners' court. Carmen Quinones of Blessed Sacrament was the game's high scorer with 18 points, while Shirley Pflagging was best for the victors with 14.

St. Anthony's Whips Priory, 61-40, to Take Tourney Title

Bill Bennings . . .

AT CHARLES TOWN

Dear Folks:

Eddie O'Hara, general manager of Bowie, was a visitor at Saturday's show and was telling me that it's amazing how many people believe his track will open the Maryland season. Many have written in for badges, which isn't surprising after all these years, but I thought all horsemen knew of the change, he said. "We are getting applications for stalls from all over the country." Lest we forget, Laurel opens the Free State campaign March 25, the day after Charles Town closes, and Bowie's dates are September 30 to October 14 and November 18 to December 2. Local officials were pleased with the first day's crowd and handle. All needed now is a fair shot by the weatherman and the meeting will be a success. See you on the rail. BILL.

McVearry's Spurt Paces 2d Half Drive

By Jules Loh

St. Anthony's outscored Priory, 32-12, in the second half and defeated the Panthers, 61-40, to win the third annual Priory tournament yesterday at Priory.

It marked the second time St. Anthony's won the tournament, capturing first place in 1948. Priory defeated the Tonys in the final round last year.

The Tonys held a slim 29-28 margin at the end of the first half. The score was tied six times and the lead changed hands four times before intermission.

In the second half, though, Tom McVearry sparked the visitors to their triumph. McVearry, who was the game's high scorer with 14 points, scored 12 points in the last two quarters.

Bob Hall and Brad Frapart each had 12 points for St. Anthony's. Bernie Foley was best for Priory with 10 points.

Few Federal Agencies Can Expect Increase in Funds by House Group

STORM SIGNAL: Few Federal agencies can expect to get increased funds from the House Appropriations Committee. In general, the committee will follow this policy: Hold 1951 budgets to this year's level and make reductions where possible.

Representative Whitten (D., Miss.), chairman of the Agriculture Subcommittee, reminded Agriculture officials of the big Federal deficit in a closed meeting and he added:

"We will be fortunate if we can go along at the same rate that we have in the past, much less increase appropriations . . . We have reached the point where we have to be selective."

The Agriculture budget as recommended by the President would add funds for 2600 new jobs.

VA: The order to fire 7800 employes of the Veterans' Administration by April 10 carries an exception for personnel people who will get the ax. The personnel employes must prepare the papers and see that the firings are legally made. After the mass firing is completed, the order states, the 100 or so personnel employes involved must give layoff notices to themselves.

VETS' CREDIT: A watered-down bill to give World War II veterans in the postal service credit toward automatic promotions for time served in the military forces is scheduled for House debate this week. The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee:

(1). Substituted the less costly Senate bill for its own promotion credit measure, and (2) rejected an amendment to extend the same benefits to all other World War II veterans in Government.

In an interview in the United States News and World Report, Potsmaster General Jesse Donaldson said the House bill would "cost us something like 87 million dollars per year and it might run to 150 million dollars after a period of two or three years, on an annual basis."

EXAM RESEARCH: Civil Service is out to improve its personal investigation type of competitive tests. Chairman Harry B. Mitchell ordered the extensive research project in a move to strengthen the commission's examining program.

The project will cover a wide range of scientific and professional jobs in grades GS-9 to GS-15. The commission usually rates applicants' character, education, experience, etc. The study, the commission hopes, will reveal how best to measure qualifications.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service has ordered the firing by April 30 of all monstatus employes here in engineering aid jobs that pay from $2200 to $3825 a year. Employes in cartographic engineering are exempted from the order . . . An examination will be announced late this month for cotton scientific aid to pay $2450 to $3100 starting salaries . . . Another up-coming test will be for research psychologist at $3825 to $4600 salaries to fill openings at the New London, Conn., Naval Medical Research Center . . . The 3000 persons who applied for the highway engineer test will be examined a week from today.

An examination for bank examiner jobs has been announced by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corportation in Richmond, Va. The jobs pay $3100 to $3825 . . . At Camp Detrick, Frederick, Md., an examination is open for biologists, $3825 to $10,000 . . . At Fort Meade, Md., a test is open for medical technician, $2875 to $3100 . . . At the VA Hospital here (2650 Wisconsin ave.) tests are open for mechanic and plumber, $2900; operating engineer, $3125, and technicians, $2875 to $3450, and at the Army Chemical Center, Md., a test is open for research entomologist, $3825 to $7600.

LOYALTY: Civil Service's loyalty review board has ordered the firing of 182 employes on disloyalty charges. Its latest report also shows that it cleared 124 employes who appealed to it; 15 cases were referred back to agency loyalty boards, and 118 cases are in the process of either appeal or the employes involved are being fired.

Minimum Record for Snowfall In District Seems Imminent

The Washington Post

IN THERE PITCHING—Taking advantage of balmy weather for a game of horseshoes are, from left, Dale Carson of Baltimore and Everett Clift, 4300 40th pl., Brentwood, Md., on lawn adjoining Commerce Building

Washington is on its way toward a record for the lowest amount of snowfall in the Weather Bureau's history.

With March showing some of its more lamb-like tendencies yesterday, the winter's mild weather made a comeback.

Weather Bureau forecasters generally predicted a new record in the offing. A normal winter has an average of 20 inches of snow; the fall this season has amounted to .3 inch.

The previous record was 2.5 inches, set 10 years ago.

Last winter, slightly over 14 inches of snow fell. Weather Bureau records date back to 1887.

The high temperatures yesterday of 61 degrees at 5 p. m. was sufficient to melt all but a few traces of ice from the Washington Monument Reflecting Pool, and to inspire the more daring of convertible drivers to roll back their tops.

It brought ball players to the city's parks, set sightseers on the prowl and family-laden cars on the streets. Parks were well populated with strollers, sitters, baby carriages and dogs.

About 40,000 persons visited the Zoo, the largest crowd of the young season. Another 4900 viewed the cloudless day from atop the Washington Monument. Police reported heavy, sluggish traffic.

Few persons recalled the brief flurry of winter earlier in the week without a shudder. Yesterday's temperature high was 30 degrees above Thursday's and Friday's tops, and 20 degrees above Saturday's best effort.

And warmer was generally the word for Sunday throughout the Nation.

The Associated Press reported that even the frosty Northeast, by no means yet defrosted, had less extreme temperatures than Saturday. The nighttime temperatures were mild most places west of Pittsburgh and south of Atlanta.

The Weather Bureau estimated that 3 to 4 inches of snow melted in Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern Illinois.

There was a generous splattering of rain over much of the Central Gulf and Southwest area, with rain general in the Pacific Northwest.

The Northeast, however, still remained in the throes of a late winter. Sunday lows included New York, 12; Boston, 19; and Philadelphia, 21.

Four Beat and Rob Copy Boy On Way to Chevy Chase Party

En route to the second round of a party that began with four strangers in an afterhours spot, a 23-year-old Washington newspaper copy boy was beaten and robbed by two of his fellow merrymakers early yesterday.

William F. Gresham of the Evening Star told police his companions made off with $20 and his wrist watch. He was cut and bruised about the face in the encounter.

Gresham said he got chummy with two couples at the Lyre Club, 919 12th st. nw., early yesterday and spent two hours with them.

At 5 a. m., the quintet decided to continue their fun at a private home, Gresham said, and started out in a cab for Chevy Chase.

The two girls sat with the driver, while he sat with the two men in the back seat, the victim said.

As the cab cruised along in the 2700 block of 31st st. nw., Gresham said, one of his companions suddenly hit him in the groin. The other delivered a rabbit punch.

The driver stopped, the men pulled Gresham from the cab, he told police, and the cabbie drove off with the two women.

The pummeling, punctuated by the robbery, continued in the street until the victim started yelling, police said. Then his assailants fled. Gresham was treated at Mount Alto Hospital.

Three other cab drivers were robbed of a total of $15 during the night.

Mrs. Bessie M. Cahill of Clinton, Md., was robbed of $9 when she opened her purse to make change for a fare at 5th and M sts. nw. Her passenger threatened her with a bottle, Mrs. Cahill reported.

Samuel M. Bradley, 27, of 4214 Spring st., Suitland, Md., said one of four passengers grabbed him around the neck while another robbed him of $6 in the 1100 block of 21st st. ne.

George Deaton, 41, of 1007 I st. ne., told police two men first held a revolver to his head, then made off with his cab when they failed to find any money on him in the 2200 block of G st. nw. The cab was later found abandoned at 21st and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Mothers Put On Guard for Sex Crimes

'Block' System Set In Arlington Due To Curb Outbreak Of Area Offenses

By Judith Spivak
Post Reporter

A "block mother" system to carry the campaign against sex offenders into the heart of the neighborhood has been set up by the Peyton Randolph Parent-Teachers Association in Arlington.

Aroused into positive action by two recent sex offenses in the area, about 20 mothers already have volunteered for the "back-fence" campaign, Comdr. M. R. Clark, 1816 S. Oakland st., Arlington, said yesterday.

Increased vigilance against sex offenders and increased awareness of their peril are sought by encouraging as many mothers as possible to carry the message in their own immediate neighborhood, Clark said.

Clark urged action at the January meeting of the P-TA and a study was undertaken. "We decided to see if we had any dangerous areas where our kids were playing, for example," he said. "We found that each person had heard of some little something. But we never did add two and two together before."

At the February meeting, the group's public health and safety committee urged that the block mother system be set up to:

1. Arouse mothers to the prevalence of sex offenses.
2. Suggest preventive measures.
3. Persuade parents to report suspected offenses promptly to police.

"The primary thing is to help educate the parents in their responsibility to their kids," Clark explains. "To get them to realize whether they really know what the children are doing all day, and where they're playing."

Block mothers remind their neighbors of the simple precautions children can be taught: To be wary of strangers who offer candy or free movies; to avoid playing alone in woods and vacant houses; to refuse rides from strangers; to play in groups whenever they're some distance from home.

And where youngsters report being molested, block mothers stress the need to report these cases to police and follow up on them with legal action, if possible.

According to Judge Hugh Reid of Arlington County's Juvenile and County Court, the child will never have to be questioned by a uniformed police officer or appear in a courtroom. His testimony can be given to a plainclothes officer or psychologist for court presentation.

U. S. Grants $522,181 For Cancer Study

Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing yesterday announced Public Health Service grants totaling $522,181 to support cancer teaching for students in 20 medical schools and 13 dental schools.

Sharing in the grants were the Howard University School of Medicine, which received $25,000, and the Georgetown Medical and Dental School, which received $5000.

The awards to medical schools totaled $458,476 and included renewal grants to 19 schools and one new grant of $25,000 to Indiana University Medical Center, at Indianapolis.

Grants to dental schools totaled $63,705, and included one new grant of $5000 to the University of Washington School of Dentistry, Seattle, and 12 renewal grants.

The awards were made by the National Cancer Institute following recommendations of the National Advisory Cancer Council and approval by Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele of the Public Health Service.

Public Health Service grants now aid cancer teaching programs in 76 of the country's 79 medical schools and 38 of the 41 dental schools.

On Wednesday

Bond Parley Scheduled At Takoma

Method of financing the proposed $200,000 bond issue for construction of a municipal building in Takoma Park, Md., is scheduled to be acted upon by Mayor John C. Post and the City Council at a special meeting Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the city offices, 16 Carroll ave.

City Clerk and Treasurer Harold J. Hilliard, sr., said yesterday that two plans have been presented by him to the finance committee headed by Councilman J. W. Nies. The committee, he said, will recommend a 10-year maturity plan at $20,000 a year based 1¾ percent interest, which would total $19,250.

The other plan would extend over 20 years at 2½ percent interest and would cost the city $52,500 in interest or a difference of $33,000 over the 10-year plan.

The city's financial condition is in "such good shape," he said that it can afford to adopt the 10-year plan.

A referendum on the bond issue will be voted upon by the residents at a date to be announced by the council. Under the law the referendum cannot be voted upon at the city election, March 28.

Rooming House Fire on Conn. Av. Suffocates Two

Construction Man, Marine Victims; Trapped When Door Wouldn't Open

Two men were suffocated yesterday in a rooming house fire after one of the victims and two other roomers tried unsuccessfully to open the locked door of their room.

Firemen found William V. Branche, 24, a construction company employe, and Marine Pfc. Vernon D. King, 18, who was visiting Branche, dead in a third-floor room at 2633 Connecticut ave. nw.

Branche, whose pounding on the door at 7 a. m. had aroused a roomer across the hall, was found on the floor just inside the doorway of his room. The daybed he had apparently occupied was afire and he had minor burns on his face, shoulders and hands. He had on underwear, a shirt, shoes and socks.

Found in His Uniform

Private First Class King, who was not burned, was found lying beside another bed which was untouched by the flames. He was in his uniform.

Police and firemen were investigating whether the blaze was caused by a cigarette or by a detective electrical wall plug near the daybed.

William R. Kern, who rooms across the hall, told police he was awakened about 7 a. m. by a loud pounding, which he found came from Branche's door. When he found he could not open it, he said, he woke up another roomer, Carroll Hughes, who also is on the third floor.

Break Down Door

As Kern and Hughes were trying to open the door, they saw smoke seeping out and called the Fire Department. Firemen broke down the door.

Pfc. King, who was stationed at the Marine Barracks, 8th and I sts. se., and Branche, an employe of the Jeffress Dyer Construction Co. here, were friends and had been seen together at about 3 a. m., police learned.

Officers at the Marine Barracks said Pfc. King enlisted in June, 1948, and had been stationed here since September, 1948.

Branch had lived at the rooming house a week.

Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, said both men died from carbon monoxide asphyxia. He withheld death certificates pending further investigation.

Brush Blaze

Falls Church Fire Perils Home Area

A crackling brush fire yesterday charred five acres of Falls Church broom sage and burned close to the edge of the Tyler Park subdivision before four fire companies brought it under control.

Falls Church Fire Chief R. D. Royston said the flames were kept from the Tyler Park homes by a wind blowing the fire in the opposite direction. The blazing brush, however, raged dangerously close to two new homes located on Lee hwy. north of the Tyler Park development.

Royston said the blaze consumed the woods between Lee blvd. and Lee hwy. just north of the subdivision. It was apparently caused, he said, by flying cinders from a trash fire in the rear of one of the Tyler Park homes.

With no roads available to the thickest part of the area, firemen encountered difficulty in getting equipment to the scene.

Companies from Dunn-Loring, Fairfax, Bailey's Crossroads and Falls Church, worked for almost an hour to control the fire.

Royston said it was the worst day this year for Falls Church. Other area firemen were kept busy all day by more than 140 fires sprouting in the tinder-dry fields and woodlands.

In the District an area of nearly five blocks of brush burned at South Dakota ave. and Higdon rd. ne. In Fairfax County, three persons were charged with violating the ordinance against open fires between midnight and 4 p. m.

The breakdown of brush fire calls yesterday: Prince Georges County, 32; Montgomery County, 30; Washington, 14; Fairfax County, 18; Falls Church, 12; Arlington, 16; Alexandria, 6; and Laurel, Md., 12.

Three Gaithersburg, Md., firemen were injured fighting a Saturday afternoon brush fire that whipped through most of a 45-acre field on the farm of John B. English, three miles west of Gaithersburg in Middlebrook.

The injured were Walter H. Hershey, 25, with first degree burns to the left eye and face; Capt. Robert Younkins, 25, with first degree burns to the left hand; and Clark Windsor, 29, with a sprained right ankle. The fire was reportedly touched off by burning trash.

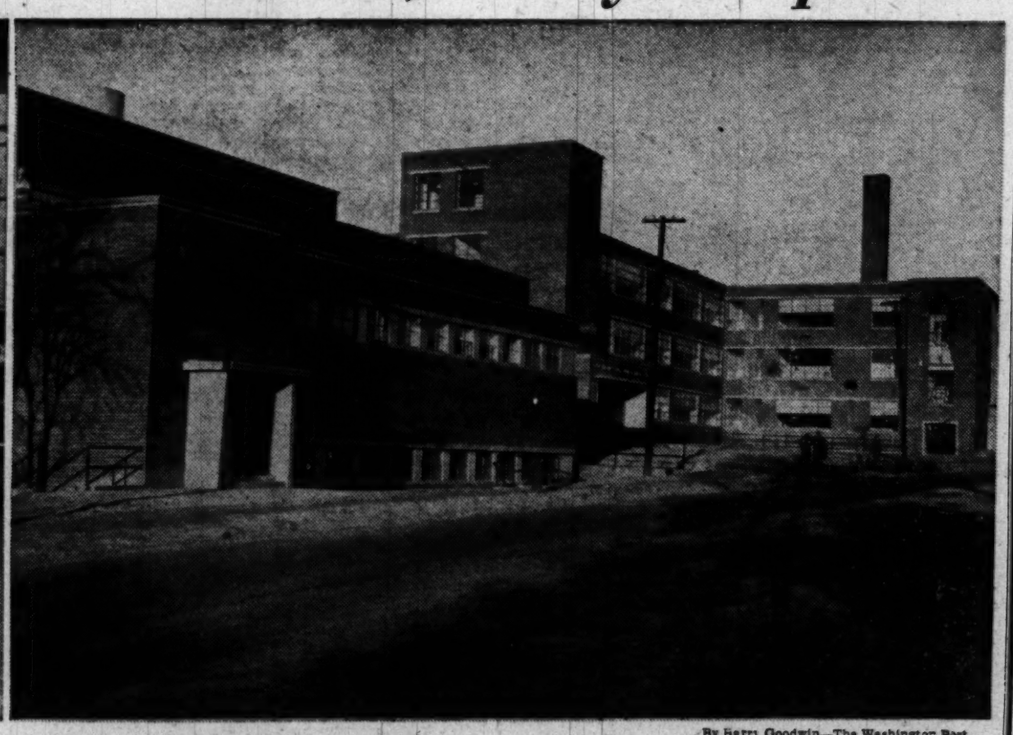
Sousa Junior High, District's Latest, Ready to Open . .



By Betty Goodwin—The Washington Post

LIBRARY ROOM HAS NEW-TYPE TABLES AND WINDOWS . . .

Ultra-modern Sousa Junior High School, a far cry from the day when teachers rang "cowbells," will open for classes today.

Some 500 wide-eyed pupils, four-fifths of them from Kramer Junior High, the others from Eliot Junior High, will converge on 37th st. se. and Ely place at 8:45 a. m. to get their first real glimpse of the latest in modern school construction.

If they see anything as obsolete as an old-fashioned school bell, it will throw the whole District school hierarchy into turmoil, but they won't.

This is 1950, and in a building of brick and steel and glass—especially glass—it is a master clock in Principal Eleanor P. McAuliffe's office with a tape bell system. There is the "intercom" telephone system connecting rooms, of course, and by next year a public address system also will have been installed.

EXTERIOR VIEW SHOWS ULTRAMODERN CONSTRUCTION AND GENEROUS USE OF GLASS

Today, after being organized into home-room groups, Sousa's new student body will be taken on a tour of the building under the guidance of the teachers, and ninth-graders serving as ushers. Students will wear name tags to get acquainted more quickly.

The $1,668,000 structure they will see includes 25 regular classrooms; six special rooms for science, home economics, art and music; four shops—print, wood, metal and general; two gymnasiums, two recreation rooms; cafeteria, auditorium, instrument room with tiers facing a podium and library, both with oval glass walls.

Seats are not expected to be installed in the auditorium until Wednesday, so there will be no general student assembly today.

But the cafeteria, which seats 500 at a time, will be open and the teachers will pitch in and help, if needed, to get the first noon-period rolling.

Twenty-three teachers have been assigned to Miss McAuliffe's faculty.

H-Bomb Fears Seen Allayed by Bible

In Series

Church Group Plans World Affairs Talks

Church people will discuss current world affairs at a series of four Monday night meetings beginning today at 8 p. m. at the Washington Federation of Churches, 1751 N st. nw.

Opening the series will be a discussion of "The Church and the United States—Russian Relationships."

Dr. William Stuart Nelson, dean of Howard University, will preside and brief talks will be given by Francis Russell, director of the Office of Public Affairs of the Department of State, and J. Raymond Wilson executive secretary of the Friends Committee on National Legislation.

On subsequent Mondays, the discussions will be on "The Church and United States Policy in the Far East," "The Church and the H-Bomb" and "The Church and President Truman's Point Four Program."

A Washington clergyman yesterday quoted Scripture to allay the fears of those who believe the world's population will be wiped out by atomic or hydrogen bombs.

He was the Rev. Dr. Louis S. Bauman, pastor of First Brethren Church, 12th and E sts. se., a student of Biblical prophesy for more than 50 years.

The Book of Revelations, he said, "shows us the future down to the day of judgment."

"In all this book there is not a single hint that this earth is to have its mass of human beings wiped off its face, or the earth itself destroyed," Dr. Bauman said.

"Assuredly, if such an enormous disaster were ahead, the prophets of God could not have overlooked it," the clergyman declared.

Discussions by scientists about the possibility of the atomic and hydrogen bombs destroying cities and even civilization, he said, are "gloomy if not terrifying."

"The whole world is in the grip of a paralyzing fear and the talk of our scientists and statesmen is not helping men to rid themselves of this great fear.

"Great judgments there are ahead of us, but not such disasters as are these possibilities that worry men of statecraft or the world of science," he continued.

"Down to the day of final judgment, he said "the Scriptures deal with a world populated by vast masses of people."

After the flood in the days of Noah, Dr. Bauman said, the Book of Genesis records that God entered into a covenant with man that "I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake . . . neither will I again smite any more every living thing as I have done."

"While the future because of the sins and follies of men may appear dark and foreboding, it is time for men to believe that the God of high heaven rather than the scientists and the politicians, assures us that no invention of man will destroy our race, Dr. Bauman concluded.

C. U. Teacher Urges National Health Plan

The Right Rev. Msgr. William J. McDonald yesterday called for a decentralized national health program which is responsive to local and changing community needs."

The priest, professor of philosophy at Catholic University, spoke to more than 200 members of the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Nurses at McMahon Hall on the university campus.

He said the church favors "every cooperative endeavor for mass health protection."

Catholic thought in the matter has been to encourage "in so far as is consonant with social welfare, individuals and groups to solve their own difficulties in their own way."

Instead of "authoritarian, overcentralized plans for a Federally-dominated organization with top-heavy bureaucracy," the monsignor said he favored a decentralized national health program which recognized the rights of every citizen and is responsive to community needs.

Msgr. McDonald said he was opposed to the compulsory health program now before Congress, but favors a voluntary program which would preserve freedom and provide for those who need medical care.

The Government, he said, should provide for building of hospitals and medical schools, but should not take over the entire program making the medical profession "functionaries of the state."

Stamp Group to Meet

Mme. N. A. K. Raza, wife of the military and air attache of the Pakistan Embassy, will award stamp prizes at the Washington Philatelic Society meeting Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Arts Club, 2017 I st. nw. A special stamp auction also is scheduled.

Queen Crowning Mar. 25

The West Virginia Society will crown its Cherry Blossom Queen at a dance to be held at the Shoreham Hotel on March 25, Charles M. Walker, president, announced yesterday. The dance will start at 10 p. m.

New Hannah Harrison School For Women Is Dedicated Here

The Hannah Harrison School of Industrial Arts, realization of a philanthropist's dream for training women to earn a livelihood, was dedicated yesterday.

About 200 attended the dedication ceremony in the foyer of the modern brick structure at 4470 MacArthur blvd. nw., constructed and endowed with funds provided by the late Julius Garfinckel as a memorial to his mother, for whom it is named.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, president of The Washington Federation of Churches, in his dedication address said Mr. Garfinckel "had what our Quaker neighbors call 'a concern,' and out of that concern came this school.

"We will look back to the founder, and through him to his mother, in gratitude."

Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, president of the YWCA, presided at the ceremony and reception that followed.

Th $3,500,000 project—including endowment—will begin operation about April 1. When fully launched, it will accommodate 50 women students, but the director, Miss Augusta H. Clawson, plans to begin with 30.

The initial subjects to be taught will be in the fields of executive housekeeping, commercial foods and secretarial work. In addition to Miss Clawson, the staff to date includes Mrs. Alta Ord, head of the executive housekeeping department; Miss Marion E. Rice, head of the commercial foods department, and Miss Lucy Doyle, resident manager.

The educators, presidents of women's organizations, past and present YWCA board members and friends of the organization inspecting the Hannah Harrison School yesterday found a building tastefully decorated in modern decor with completely equipped classrooms, living room-library, recreation room, private bedrooms for the students and other features.

In these homelike surroundings the successful applicants may stay up to a year while learning a job her only expense being her clothes.

Montgomery Council President to Speak

Frederic P. Lee, president of the Montgomery County Council, will speak to the Montgomery County Young Republican Club on "Problems of the County Council and the Council's Approach to Them," today at 8 p. m. in the Bethesda, Md., County Building.

Election of officers is slated for the business session.

Alta Vista Commercial Zone Opposed

Denial of a petition for commercial zoning at Old Georgetown rd. and Beach dr., Alta Vista, Bethesda, Md., has been recommended by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. A public hearing will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. at the Bethesda County Building by the County Council.

The petition, filed by the Cambridge Construction Co. asks rezoning of approximately 60,641 square feet on the west side of Old Georgetown rd. to permit construction of a shopping center.

The commission contends that the proposed zoning is not in accord with the proposed master zoning plan and that construction of small shopping centers too close to the Bethesda shopping district might result in spotting the area with "isolated commercial districts."

Two other petitions scheduled for public hearing the same night have been approved by the planning commission.

They are: Thomas M. Anderson, agent for Charles B. Hawley, asking commercial zoning for a tract of 1.21 acres on the north side of East-West hwy. about 200 feet east of Wisconsin ave., and Ben Tarmini, asking commercial zoning for lot 45 on the northwest side of Fairmont ave., in the Woodmont subdivision, Bethesda.

Fr. Mitchell Dies; Former C. U. Dean

The Rev. Thomas Edward Mitchell, 49, former dean of Catholic University's school of social work, died Saturday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Vincent A. Goudreau, 3010 Adams st. ne., after an illness of a year.

Fr. Mitchell

At the time of his death, he was pastor of St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, Richmond.

Father Mitchell, former director of Catholic charities in the Richmond Diocese, was born in Staunton, Va., where he was educated in local parochial schools. He studied at St. Charles Seminary at Catonsville, Md., and received his degree of doctor of divinity at the North American College in Rome, where he was ordained in 1927.

He later served as assistant pastor of St. Mary's Church, Norfolk, and Holy Comforter Church, Lynchburg, Va., before specializing at Catholic University for his work as director of Catholic Charities in Richmond. At this time, he was also chaplain of St. Joseph's Villa in Richmond.

Father Mitchell returned to his home diocese to resume parish work in June, 1947, when he left Catholic University. He had been appointed dean in 1938.

Father Mitchell's body has been taken to Richmond, where it will lie in state beginning at 7 p. m. Monday at St. Elizabeth's Church.

In addition to his sister, Mrs. Goudreau, Father Mitchell is survived by his mother, Mrs. Margaret Dore Mitchell of Blacksburg; another sister, Mrs. Louis A. Onesty of Blacksburg; three brothers, James D. of Washington, William A. of Richmond and Dennis M. Mitchell of Chicago.

A requiem mass will be said by the Rev. Dr. Francis J. Byrne of St. Bridget's Church, a former classmate, Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. at St. Elizabeth's Church. Burial will follow in Thornrose Cemetery, Staunton.

Mrs. Scott Dies; Widow of Army Chief

Princeton, N. J., March 5.—Mrs. Mary Merrill Scott, widow of Gen. Hugh Lenox Scott, Army Chief of Staff when the United States entered the first World War, died at her home today after a lengthly illness.

Born in Columbia, Pa., on May 31, 1862, Mrs. Scott had been a resident of Princeton for more than half a century. Her husband, who had a long military career, reached the age of retirement as Army Chief of Staff in 1917 and served for the following two years as commandant at Camp Dix, N. J. He died in 1934.

A son, two daughters and a sister survive. Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p. m. at the Trinity Episcopal Church, with burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

Albert Glaze, Retired VA Worker, Dies

Albert A. Glaze, 74, of 3101 13th st. nw., a retired Veterans' Administration accountant, died Saturday at Bethesda Naval Hospital after a year's illness.

Mr. Glaze, a veteran of 40 years of Government service, worked first with the Panama Canal Commission for several years. He then joined the War Risk Bureau and subsequently the Veterans Bureau, which became the present Veterans' Administration, and served in their accounting divisions for 32 years prior to his retirement four years ago.

Mr. Glaze was a native of Coshocton, Ohio, and a graduate of the University of Nebraska.

He was a Scottish Rite Mason for more than 40 years, a member of Almas Temple of the Shrine, and a past master of Lafayette Lodge. He was a Spanish-American War veteran and a past commander of Lawton Camp here.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Stella Blanchard Glaze; a brother, Wilbur Glaze of Turlock, Calif.; a niece, Miss Zelda Glaze of Santa Cruz, and a nephew, Arlo Simons of Modesto, Calif.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 10 a. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral chapel, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hogan

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth M. Hogan, 68, Washington resident for the past 33 years, will be held at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday at the Chambers funeral home, 517 11th st. se. Mass will said in St. Peter's Catholic Church at 9 a. m. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Hogan, who lived at 923 Potomac ave. se., died at Sacred Heart Home, Hyattsville, Md., on March 2. She was a native of Clintonville, Wis.

She is survived by 11 children, Arthur Francis, Raymond, Bernard and Walter Hogan and Mrs. Alice Reamy, Mrs. Rose Earnest, Mrs. Elizabeth Montgomery and Mrs. Patricia Smith, all of Washington, and Mrs. Ethel Robison, California, and Mrs. Helen Flippo, Maryland.

Also surviving are 20 grandchildren and 8 great-grandchildren.

William Bahret

William Bahret, 73, retired gardener, died at his home, 114 Kenilworth ave., Garrett Park, Md., Saturday from a heart attack.

A resident of Garrett Park for the past eight years, he spent most of his life as head gardener for Amos Tuck French, New York banker, in Tuxedo, N. Y.

Born in Germany, he came to America at the age of 11. He is survived by a son, William Bahret, jr. Funeral services will be in Tuxedo Park.

Course in Baby Care Set Up for Grandmothers

A three-day refresher course in the latest techniques of infant care and baby-sitting will be offered to "expectant grandmothers" by the District Red Cross Nursing Service. The sessions will begin March 13 at Welsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Mrs. Herbert S. Dudley, chairman of the nursing service, said the classes, to be held from 10 to 12 noon and 1 to 3 p. m., are the result of a demand from women who have grandchildren on the way and want to know the latest scientific methods of baby care.

Miss Mary DeLaskey, registered Red Cross nurse, will instruct the course. Women interested in enrolling for the course are asked to telephone the Red Cross Nursing Service at HObart 6800.

Dr. Todd to Speak

Dr. Anna Coyne Todd will discuss mental hygiene at a meeting of the Oxon Hill District Citizens Association at 8 p. m. Tuesday in Oxon Hill, Md., Elementary School.

College Park Meeting

The College Park Business Men's Association will meet at 8 o'clock tonight in the College Park Firehouse. President Charles A. Gentile has arranged a special program.

Sid Grauman Dies; Noted Film Figure

Hollywood, March 5 (U.P.).—Sid Grauman, 71, pioneer Hollywood showman who built the famed Chinese Theater, died today at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, where he had been a heart patient for two weeks.

Mr. Grauman

He had no close relatives, and only his physician, Dr. Myron Prinzmetal, and his secretary, Gertrude Skall, were present.

Grauman managed the Chinese Theater until his illness. The movie colony paid tribute to him recently at a testimonial banquet.

His full name was Sidney Patrick Grauman, the middle name coming from the fact that he was born on St. Patrick's Day.

He never produced any movies, and he never acted in any until he played himself in a picture last year. He said a story that he once played a juvenile role in a picture named "Trail of the Gold Rush" was just a Hollywood legend.

But he was one of Hollywood's most able showmen.

He built two of Hollywood's most ornate and best publicized theaters—the Egyptian and the Chinese—where he immortalized the footprints of screen heroes in concrete.

Grauman built the Chinese Theater in 1927 and sold it to Fox-West Coast two years later. He stayed on as its manager. It was there that he produced his once-famed prologues—stage tableaux especially prepared to create the right mood for the day's screen fare.

It was there also that he began immortalizing the reigning screen queens and heroes by preserving their footprints and handprints in the concrete forecourt. Norma Talmadge was the first one so honored, on opening day, May 18, 1927.

Grauman was born in Indianapolis, Ind., on March 17, 1879, but in recent years he never would admit how old he was. He was one of three children and outlived both his brother and sister.

After a trip to Alaska during the gold rush, he went with his father to San Francisco and opened their first theater.

69th Year Helping Build Greater Washington

Kenilworth

. . . A Section of Washington centering around 44th St. N.E., between the Anacostia River and Eastern Avenue.

Named by Allen W. Mallery, the developer, after Sir Walter Scott's tale of "Kenilworth"—in the belief that every man's house is his castle. The community of Kenilworth occupies part of a 940 acre estate granted Joshua Beall by Lord Baltimore.

Like the developer of Kenilworth, our aim since 1881 has been to provide an opportunity for families of moderate income to secure home ownership. To that end, loans aggregating many millions of dollars have been made by Washington Permanent toward home buying—building—repairing—re-financing. We invite a friendly discussion of your problem and our service.

Sun Is Welcome, But So Is A Tea or Cocktail Party On a Sunday Afternoon

By Elizabeth Maguire

SUDDENLY it was Spring yesterday, and many Washingtonians enjoyed a walk in the sun. But still, it was a popular day to be at home.

Maj. Gen. Paul H. Streit, commanding general of the Army Medical Center, and Mrs. Streit received from 4 to 6 p. m., entertaining for new officers at the post and their wives. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Breakey invited over 100 guests to a house warming tea, also between 4 and 6.

Another tea will be given next Sunday by General and Mrs. Streit. Their guests yesterday, numbering nearly 200, were officers assigned to Walter Reed General Hospital. Next Sunday their guests will be officers assigned to Army Medical Center Headquarters and Army Medical Department Research and Graduate School.

Drive in Country Adds to Party

A DRIVE into the country in late afternoon was an added treat for the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith who entertained at the Congressional Country Club. Their small cocktail party was followed by a buffet supper.

Earlier in the day Undersecretary of Commerce Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney and Mrs. Whitney drove out to Normandy Farms to be the luncheon guests of Gen. and Mrs. Elwood R. Quesada.

Prince Bernhard Expected Tuesday

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, the Prince of the Netherlands, is expected in Washington tomorrow. In his own DC-3, he will take off from Fort Worth, Tex., early in the morning, flying directly to National Airport, where he will be met by the Netherlands Ambassador. Eleco van Kleffens. During his visit of two days in Washington, he will be a house guest of the Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens.

Keenly interested in all phases of civil and military aviation, he has inspected the Lockheed and Douglas aircraft factories in Los Angeles and he is scheduled to visit the Carswell Air Force Base at Fort Worth, as guest of the United States Air Force. He is a member of the board of directors of KLM, famous Netherlands air lines. The prince has taken courses in piloting various types of aircraft and holds an International Civil Aeronautics Organization pilot's license.

He was married to Princess Juliana on January 7, 1937, and when Princess Juliana became Queen in September 1948, the prince was given the title of His Royal Highness, Prince of the Netherlands. He was born Prince of Lippe-Biesterfeld at Jena, Germany, on June 29, 1911, the son of Bernhard, Prince of Lippe, and Armguard, Freiin von Sierstorpff-Cramm. Queen Juliana and the prince have four daughters: Princesses Beatrix, Irene, Margriet and Marijke.

FAIRFAX COUNTY, one of the oldest in the country gets a new historical society. The Fairfax Historical Society, which hopes to protect the beautiful county "from the onslaught of too much progress" which is now destroying some of the historic landmarks, held its first meeting last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Parry, jr., of McLean, Va. Here Mrs. Parry, treasurer of the society, gets some business matters straightened out with John W. Rixby Smith of Fairfax (center) who is president of the group, and M. Thatcher Paris, also of Fairfax, who is secretary. Every adult citizen of the county is invited to join

What's Paris Doing To Skirt Lengths?

It's true that some of the Paris dressmakers have shortened skirt lengths again. In fact, I find some a little too short for real grace and good balance.

Some of the smartest skirt lengths are as short as 15½ inches from the floor although some houses lower it an inch.

It's interesting however, that some of the top collections include several skirt lengths for different types of dresses. This is a part of the new trend to make fashion suit the individual woman instead of forcing her to conform to fashion.

Librarian's Life Dull? Not to an American in the Near East

Dr. Carter Has Unique Career

By Evon N. Clark

ATHENS, GREECE.—The next time you hear some pessimist wonder if the United States is winning the war of words, you might tell him about Mary Duncan Carter, Ph.D.

In the past two and half years as a director of the United States Information Service libraries in the Near East, Dr. Carter has organized and supervised American libraries in Istanbul, Ankara, Beirut, Damascus, Bagdad, Athens, Salonika, and Tehran. She has the building set up for another in Tel Aviv.

To Dr. Carter this is part of the realization of an ambition she's cherished since she was 16.

Had Her Share Of Adventures

NOW, Dr. Mary Duncan Carter is as much at home on planes taking her from one of her libraries to another as she is in her well-ordered apartment in Cairo.

What's more, she's had her share of the adventure she craved. Falling shrapnel, sirens and the roar of antiaircraft guns in the troubled areas she services have bleached white wings on either side of her invariably well-coiffed black hair.

Last year in Bagdad, when the feeling was still strong against any foreigners, including Americans, Dr. Carter had to remove the USIS sign from the street door of the library.

"It was like the speakeasies of the Capone days," she said. "You went through a nameless door, up a stairs and around a balcony. There you'd find a huge room filled with Iraqui boys and men, avidly reading American books."

Love and Science In Her Province

SOMETIMES Dr. Carter wonders just where her job ends. Citizens of the Near East come to her with all manner of personal problems, from finances to love affairs. She's always being invited to exotic weddings and interminably long baptisms.

In the USIS library on Churchill st. in Athens, persons from all walks of life browse among the books. A professor comes in for magazines dealing with educational life and thought in America. A scientist asks for "Principles of Mathematical Physics." Dentists and doctors come in to read the adequate medical section of the library.

MICHAEL MANTOUDIS, director of Letters, Theaters and Cinema in Athens, presents Dr. Carter with a bouquet at the end of her seminar for Greek librarians

GUARD in fez (at right) posted outside the USIS library in Cairo provides exotic touch, but inside, browsing readers can skim through John Steinbeck's latest novel or the Broadway hit, "A Streetcar Named Desire."

Professional people and government officials form the largest part of USIS library clientele throughout Dr. Carter's area. University students run a close second.

The Cairo library has 10,000 volumes and over 7000 pamphlets, all by American authors and organizations.

In Athens, although only 10 percent of the library collection includes fiction, it makes up about 30 percent of the daily circulation. Among the 259 volumes of representative American fiction in the Athens library, those that have been taken out most often are John Steinbeck's "Tortilla Flat" and "The Moon Is Down," with Pearl Buck's "East Wind, West Wind" and the late Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" close runners-up. Dorothy Parker, John Dos Passos, Ernest Hemingway and Sinclair Lewis are favorites.

AMERICAN plays are much in demand. "A Streetcar Named Desire" has been out every day since it first arrived in the Athens library. In Cairo, "Arsenic and Old Lace" is still the most popular United States play. Dr. Carter says there are few book losses in the libraries she directs.

Dr. Carter's philosophy is that books are expendable, anyway.

"It's the ideas in books that count. The purpose of a library is to transfer ideas from books to the minds of the readers."

"Reasonable amount of book loss is not only to be expected, it is justifiable," she told Greek librarians who had been deducting book losses from salaries of the unfortunates who checked out the missing volumes.

Yet Dr. Carter is still far from satisfied with the number of people serviced by the Near East USIS libraries. Relatively few among those populations read English. Dr. Carter wants funds allocated for translation of American books into the various languages. Moreover she'd like to establish reading rooms in isolated villages.

Long Road Between Chicago and Cairo

BUT dreams aren't so easily realized, this dynamic woman knows. Her own childhood ambition took a long time to materialize.

After receiving a bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago, she went through graduate library school.

Then McGill University in Montreal asked her to teach in its summer library school. Next, Skidmore College asked her to head its library school.

After a year at Skidmore, Mary Duncan married art connoisseur Sidney Carter of Montreal and gave up forever—or so she thought—her cherished cause and her career. A honeymoon in Europe, a home in Montreal, the birth of a son, Duncan, and two years of homemaking ensued.

Then McGill, which had been granted an endowment from the Carnegie Foundation for a full-time library school, asked Mrs. Carter to head it. She accepted and remained for ten years, helping to establish libraries in Montreal and environs. When she received a fellowship from the Carnegie Foundation to do advanced work, she moved to the University of Chicago.

In the summer of 1944 her son joined the Army and Dr. Carter wanted to help in the war. The Office of War Information asked her to organize a library at Cairo. It was her big chance to try out her girlhood dream of uniting the world through books.

After organizing a library and a library association in Egypt she resigned in the summer of '46 but in '47, the State Department asked her to take over the regional directorship in the Near East—to establish libraries, make recommendations for future developments.

American Way Spread by Books

This fall Dr. Carter inaugurated a system for augmenting the Athens personnel without additional cost. Her project is the Women's Library Committee, composed of wives of Americans stationed here for ECA, AMAG and Embassy. The women meet once a month, offer suggestions and each does three hours volunteer work a week in the library.

Dr. Carter has just finished a seminar for Greek librarians. She thought only a few would enroll. But it turned out that 76 librarians from all over Greece, including some from Crete and Macedonia, attended every lecture. As a result of this seminar, conducted after work hours, the president of the Council of Greek Librarians announced that hereafter American and not European library methods would be used throughout Greece.

Annual Scout Cookie Sale Begins Today

A miniature army of 16,000 Girl Scout salesmen will open the annual Scout cookie sale today in the National Capital Area Federation.

The 1950 cookie sale is the sole support for all Girl Scout camping activities. Through profits derived from it, Scouts from Washington and the outlying counties of Montgomery, Fairfax, Arlington, Prince Georges and Alexandria are given the opportunity for at least two weeks of outdoor camping at a Girl Scout camp.

The fund also supports the Girl Scout day camps and the all-year-round camp and hike sites which offer the troops out-of-doors experience and training for more advanced camping.

Mrs. Truman, honorary national president of the Girl Scouts, was presented the first box of cookies on February 24 at Blair House.

ANNE

What's Good Party Fare When You're The Hostess?—Anne Recommends Her Cheese and Hamburger Canapes

PARTY fare is a subject that seems to stump a lot of us. We eat delectable tidbits at somebody else's house, then wonder when we get ready to entertain just what it was they had in them.

It's especially a problem when you have no help and have to prepare all the food yourself ahead of time. Take K. L. P., for instance

DEAR ANNE:
My husband and I are planning to have some of his business friends in for a cocktail party quite soon. Can you give me a few receipes for canapes that aren't too much trouble to make or serve, as I will have no maid for this occasion.
K. L. P.

Cold canapes are, of course, lots easier to serve than the hot ones, as you don't have to be running back and forth to the oven. Here are a few:

CHIPPED BEEF ROLLS: Blend together 1 package cream cheese, 1 teaspoon horseradish and ½ teaspoon mustard. Take ¼ pound chipped beef, spread out the slices and spread with the cheese mixture. Roll up like jelly roll and fasten with toothpicks. Chill before serving.

SHARP CHEESE CANAPES: Run 1 pound of any good sharp cheese through a meat grinder, along with 1 clove garlic. Blend into this 1 package cream cheese. Form into rolls and roll in paprika until well covered. Chill and when ready to use, slice. Serve on round crackers or pieces of toast.

CLAM-COTTAGE CHEESE DIP: This can be served in a bowl, surrounded by potato chips or round crackers so that guests can dip in for themselves. Mix contents of small can of minced clams with pint carton of cottage cheese or 2 packages cream cheese and 1 teaspoon minced onion. If necessary, thin with mayonnaise. Salt and pepper to taste. Chill thoroughly before serving.

If you feel you can manage one hot canape—will the crowd especially the men—appreciate this one:

HOT HAMBURGER CANAPES: Grind up 2 medium onions and 1 green pepper. Mix with 1 pound hamburger, salt and pepper, and make into marble-sized balls. Cut bread with small cookie-cutter, butter each piece and place meat ball in center. Press in middle and fill depression with chili sauce. Chill, then run under broiler to toast just before serving.

DEAR ANNE:
We received a number of silver wedding presents which we cannot display in our small apartment. In fact, we seldom have the opportunity to use them now, since my husband is a G.I. student, and I am working and we rarely entertain. I would like to pack them in a trunk in a closet and wonder if you can tell me some way to protect them from tarnish so that they will be in fairly good condition when I do have occasion to take them out on short notice. B. B. J.

In storing silver away, there are several methods of preventing tarnish—at least, partially. A tarnish-proof chest is fine for flatware, as you undoubtedly know. You can also buy tarnish-proof cloth to wrap it in. Perhaps some of your pieces came in just such a wrapping.

If you haven't the chest or cloth, wrapping silver in tissue paper and storing in a large tin can with a tight lid is often effective. Putting a large chunk of camphor in with the silver will help.

You might also consider applying clear lacquer to such pieces as candlesticks and vases. Clean thoroughly first, wipe off with alcohol, then brush on the lacquer.

PETUNIA!

Nothing is quite so
Depressing, I think,
As a thoroughly, dismally
Old fashioned sink.

Then dress it up, Petunia! You can make a gay flounce from shower curtain material—like this:

Dr. Koo to Address University Women

"China at the Cross Roads" is the title of the talk which Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, will give at the University Womens' Club this afternoon. The meeting, which has been arranged by the club's legislative committee, Ethel M. Johnson, chairman, will be held at the club house, 1515 New Hampshire ave. nw.

There will be a reception from 4:30 to 5 p. m. with the receiving line headed by Dr. Elizabeth Conrad, president of the club. Dr. Koo will be introduced by Dr. Stanley Hornbeck.

Sisterhood to Hear Paul Hume Today

Paul C. Hume, music critic of The Washington Post, will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Adas Israel Sisterhood today at 1:30 p. m. at the Synagogue, 6th and I sts. nw. The program will include greetings by the president, Mrs. Philip Goldstein, and a message from Rabbi Solomon H. Metz.

Mr. Hume will be introduced by Mrs. Meyer Goldberg, sisterhood chairman for the congregation-sponsored symphonic concert of Jewish music and song being held on March 22 at Constitution Hall, in commemoration of Jewish music month.

A reception and tea will follow the meeting.

To market, to market, not to buy a fat hen, but a young, very tender broiler chicken, weighing one and a half to two and a half pounds—one serving two. Plentiful now around 43 cents. Today's dinner is taken from a spanking new General Mills booklet titled "Talks About Broilers," which presents recipes, marketing tips and preparation helps. A glance through the pamphlet shows the broiler to be a most versatile bird. It can be stuffed and oven cooked, pan fried or barbecued.

PAN-FRIED BROILER

Cut broiler into serving-sized pieces. Rinse in cold water. Dry. Flour pieces by shaking several at a time in a paper bag containing one cup all-purpose flour, two teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, two teaspoons paprika. Heat in heavy skillet one-half cup butter or margarine and enough fat to make one-half inch depth in skillet. Place chicken in hot fat, skin side down. Brown on all sides. Add three tablespoons water. Turn heat low, cover tightly and cook slowly about 35 to 40 minutes, or until tender. To crisp the crust, remove cover and cook 5 to 10 minutes longer. Use fat left from the chicken, plus extra if needed, to make the cream gravy.

Three Killed By Maniac Knife Wielder

New York, March 5 (U.P.).—A 19-year-old youth freed four days ago from a mental hospital cut three men to death and stabbed four others with a 14-inch bread knife today as he ran shouting through Brooklyn streets.

Two patrolmen clubbed William Jones, 19, with gun butts to capture him, then had to tie him to a chair at the station house to quiet him.

His 15-minute rampage along three blocks left a trail of blood. Police said he went berserk, apparently without reason, and stole the knife from a restaurant counter.

Two of the wounded were in critical condition. They are Aniello Durso, 61, and Matthew Kennedy, 21.

Joseph Bonzolato and James Yernes, 20, were treated at hospitals and released.

Slain had friends were Frank St. George, 46; Jerome Sullivan, 51, and John Gordon, elderly resident of a shelter for the homeless in Manhattan.

Police said Jones first stabbed Bonzolato in the right side as the victim stepped off a bus.

Then Jones ran to where James Culhane, 28, and Kennedy, a Mohawk Indian, were standing by carriages in which their babies were riding. Stepping up to Kennedy, Jones asked: "Do you recognize me?"

Before Kennedy realized what was happening, Jones turned toward Culhane and pointed the knife. Culhane grabbed both baby carriages and ran. The attacker turned on Kennedy and stabbed him twice in the chest.

Hit-Run Victim's Bicycle Found

With discovery of his missing bicycle yesterday, Montgomery County Police determined that John Bowman, 21-year-old Olney farm worker, was victim of a hit-and-run car.

Detective Corpl. Frank Griggs of the Rockville station yesterday broadcast by teletype and radio a lookout for a black automobile with a dented right rear fender, a damaged front bumper probably showing signs of red and white paint from the bicycle and a broken windshield, probably of 1937-38 vintage.

The bicycle, which had been missing, was turned over to police yesterday by Harry M. Allcock of near Fairland, Md. Allcock said he picked up the bike and took it home with him. He saw accounts of the finding of Bowman beside the road in yesterday's newspapers and went to the Silver Spring substation to report that he had it.

It was determined that the bicycle was found about 60 feet from where Bowman was found Saturday at 6:30 a. m.

Bowman, married just a month, was in critical condition at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, yesterday, both feet frozen and suffering head injuries. He was still unconscious last night.

Police believe that Bowman was riding his bicycle toward home when he was struck. He apparently was thrown back on the hood of the automobile and is believed to have struck and broken the windshield. The car then struck a telephone pole with its rear fender, marks on the pole show.

Neighbors Replace Home for Family After Fire

Norfolk, Va., March 4 (AP).—Less than four days ago, the home of the 11-member L. R. Stowe family burned to the ground.

Today the Stowes moved into a brand-new six-room house, built on the ashes of the old by kind-hearted neighbors.

Thirty working hours sufficed for construction of the house. But the neighbors did more than build it. They furnished it as well.

In fact, so great was the response to an appeal for furniture that when the Stowes, tearfully thankful, moved in today they had to stack some of the excess in the back yard.

Christian Unit Formed by Jewish Appeal

Formation of a National Christian Committee of the United Jewish Appeal to aid the 1950 UJA drive for $272,455,800 was announced yesterday by Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., national chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Senator Robert A. Taft will be honorary chairmen of the group. Associate chairmen will be W. Averell Harriman, Sumner Welles, Jesse Jones and Eric Johnston.

Proceeds of the UJA drive will be used by its three agencies—United Palestine Appeal, Joint Distribution Committee and the United Service for New Americans—for relief and rehabilitation of Jews in Europe, Israel, in Moslem lands and in the United States.

Senator Taft said aid to the Republic of Israel "represents an investment in humanity and also in the future of the ideals of freedom and peace."

Roosevelt said the major task to be done during 1950 is to help the 150,000 immigrants expected in Israel, the 85,000 newcomers who arrived last year and are still in temporary camps. Also needing aid are half a million Jews in Europe, others in Moslem lands and thousands arriving in this country.

Four Men Added To Board of CED

New York, March 5. (U.P.).—Election of four businessmen to the board of trustees of the Committee for Economic Development was announced today by CED Chairman W. Walter Williams.

The new board members are Stanley Charles Allyn, president of the National Cash Register Co.; D. W. Figgis, chairman of the board of directors of American Can Co.; Carrol M. Shanks, president of Prudential Insurance Co. of America, and Gwilym A. Price, president of Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Their election increases to 124 the number of businessmen on the board of CED, an organization which analyzes national issues relating to the economy.

PSORIASIS
(ENEMY OF BEAUTY)
has lost its terror for me!
"In former days I was often beside myself mentally and physically because of ugly psoriasis lesions. That is why I wish everybody could know the wonderful things Siroil did for me. My thanks and appreciation go out to you."
(FROM ONE OF HUNDREDS OF LETTERS IN OUR FILES)
This expression of appreciation is typical of thousands which Siroil Laboratories has received. Many of the letters are pathetic in their gratitude. Are ugly, disfiguring psoriasis lesions your problem, too? Then you try Siroil. Siroil tends to remove crusts and scales of psoriasis lesions external in character and on outer layer of skin. If lesions recur, light applications will help control them. Siroil does not stain clothing or bed linen. It's offered to you on a two-weeks-satisfaction-or-money-refunded basis. Families Hit By Bus Lines' Tug of War

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Two bus companies are in a tug of war in nearby Maryland with 2700 families caught in the middle of the rope.

They live along New Hampshire ave. extended near Silver Spring and Hyattsville. An equal number planning to move into apartments and homes now under construction are watching the developments anxiously—as are their real estate agents.

The situation came about this way:

Last September the Capital Transit Co. extended a New Hampshire ave. line to Piney Branch rd. to serve the newly built Northwest Park Apartments, which now has 224 occupied units and 650 more under construction. The line also served residents of 500 apartments located near University la. and about 2000 recently built homes near the avenue.

Prospects Looked Bright

Prospects for patronage on the line looked bright since one developer announced plans to start a 1500-unit apartment development along University lane and another builder later disclosed plans for building 600 homes nearby.

According to E. Cleveland Giddings, CTC vice president, the line has been a losing proposition and probably will continue so for some time, but it does serve to feed in patronage to the city lines which it meets at New Hampshire and Eastern aves.

The Safeway Trails, Inc., has been operating along New Hampshire also, bringing in passengers from Laurel to Washington, but drivers may not pick up customers past Hillandale. The firm, taking cognizance of the building boom, applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to pick up passengers along New Hampshire up to the District line.

Capital Transit countered with a letter to tenants declaring that if Safeway was allowed in, it would bow out.

Authorized to Enter

Meanwhile, hearings were held on February 9, a recommended order was announced authorizing Safeway to come in.

A group of 200 residents of Northwest Park Apartments submitted a petition to ICC asking the recommended order be set aside because if it went through, they "will lose the bus service presently furnished by the Capital Transit Co." This was characterized as "excellent service," the loss of which would be a "great misfortune."

Last week, the ICC authorized the residents to intervene in the case and gave until April 3 for any other interested parties to also apply. Safeway was given until March 13 to reply to the request by the Northwest Park Apartment residents for a further hearing.

On Thursday, the CTC applied to the Maryland Public Service Commission for a one-year renewal of a permit to operate the line starting April 1, but noted that it would ask authority to abandon if the Safeway petition is granted.

Fare Differential

The pros and cons of the service, as furnished by both companies are:

Fare—Capital Transit, 14 cents to the District line from the Northwest development and 13 cents cash within the District; Safeway, 30 cents. The latter, however, is direct with no transfers necessary and would save 20 to 30 minutes, according to Francis J. Ortman, company attorney.

Service—20 minutes during rush hours from Northwest plus 10 minute service from Lebanon st., which is located along New Hampshire closer to the District, and 30 minute service the rest of the day—62 in all; Safeway, five to District and five from District.

Ortman added that if the CTC carries through its threat, the line "will keep at least one bus in steady operation between Washington and White Oaks during rush hours and more if business warrants during rush and non-rush hours."

$8 Million Martin Institute Nearly Finished at Md. U.

The University of Maryland's new "Glenn L. Martin Institute of Technology" is fast nearing completion, but it won't be given that formal name for perhaps another year.

As the university released an architect's drawing of the institute, President Harry C. Byrd said yesterday that it will have an eight-million-dollar plant, paid for both by State funds and by a 2½-million-dollar gift from Martin, the Baltimore aircraft manufacturer.

Byrd also said that when Martin gave the money several years ago he indicated he hoped in time to make additional gifts bringing the total to 10 million dollars. Byrd said any such new gifts would be used for endowment.

With $625,000 just appropriated by the 1950 Legislature, the institute will be able to complete, probably by the fall term in 1951, a physics building. This will be the seventh of eight planned buildings.

Byrd explained that Martin first gave the $2,500,000 fund for an engineering and aeronautical science school. Then the university decided to broaden it into an institute of technology and to honor Martin by giving it his name. The name hasn't yet been adopted officially but it will be, Byrd said, by the board of regents.

The eight buildings that make up the institute are: (1) chemistry classroom building (money appropriated by 1949 Legislature, contract soon to be let, ready in fall of 1951; (2) chemistry research building, with laboratories (covered in same appropriation and plans in the same stage as number 1; (3) physics building (latest appropriations plus $100,000 previously available will build this building, ready in fall of 1951); (4) mathematics (a proposed building to supplant temporary war-surplus frame buildings now in use); (5) engineering classroom; (6) engineering shop and labs; (7) engineering wind tunnel; (8) chemical engineering building. These last four are all occupied, three of them last fall and the fourth the previous year.

Postlude

Robert Casadesus Is Heard In Finale of Piano Series

By Richard Keith

The last in Patrick Hayes' highly successful piano recital series was given yesterday afternoon at Constitution Hall by the French pianist, Robert Casadesus.

Much to the relief of many listeners, who have been through two years of Chopin and Brahms anniversary concerts, Casadesus, with reckless irreverence, by-passed both of these venerable tyrants of piano programs.

He committed further heresy by playing one of the Beethoven sonatas which lacks a popularizing epithet, Opus 110, in A-flat major. This refreshing work is one of the most ingratiating of all of Beethoven's later compositions. It is not long and its substance, while startling enough, is not unduly involved. With typical Gallic reserve, Casadesus gave a clean, detailed exposition, allowing no nuance to escape notice. As a matter of fact, for Beethoven, it seemed a little too fussy. It is, nevertheless, better to overdo precision than to neglect it.

In the Schumann Symphonic Etudes, he gave the fiery passions of the music free rein. Here, his crystal-clear passage work served to bring these often blurred pieces into sharp, bright focus. By carefully holding down the dynamic level in the early parts, he succeeded in producing a crashing climax at the end.

The six Debussy preludes, which closed the program, showed Casadesus at his greatest. His carefully studied application of the pedal created over and over again the illusion of strings and woodwinds.

With a little imagination, it was easy for the listener to conjure up the sultry heat of "La Puerta del Vino," the austere movements of "Danseuses de Delphes," and the submarine aberrations of "La Cathedrale engloutie." Casadesus' calculated impressionism is a far cry from the common veiled variety.

The concert began with tasteful performances of two works for harpsichord, Rameau's Gavotte Variee and Bach's Italian Concerto.

Planned Parenthood Group Plans Lunch

The Planned Parenthood Association of the District will hold its annual luncheon today at 12:30 p. m. at Barker Hall of the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

Features of the meeting will be election of officers and an address by Mrs. Walter E. Campbell, Massachusetts member of the board of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

New Faces Slated For Md. Assembly

Annapolis, Md., March 5 (AP).—No matter how November's State elections turn out, there are sure to be many new faces in the 1951 General Assembly.

Many of the 123 delegates and 29 senators have indicated they will not run for office again.

Others will file for other elective jobs. Some of the delegates are casting covetous eyes on the State Senate. At least one delegate—A. Gordon Boone, Baltimore County Democrat—will try for a seat in Congress.

Two Republican Senators—Roy Tasco Davis of Montgomery County and Harry T. Phoebus of Somerset County—have been talking about filing for their party's gubernatorial nomination.

Davis is considered an almost certain candidate. He may announce formally within 10 days.

State Senate President Joseph A. Byrnes has announced he will not be a candidate for public office this year. The Baltimore attorney is rounding out eight years' service as one of the most influential members of the Senate.

House Speaker C. Ferdinand Sybert is a likely contender for the Senate seat now held by P. G. Stromberg, also a Howard County Democrat.

This would mean that both houses would have new presiding officers in 1951.

Senator L. Harold Sothoron of Prince Georges County, floor leader for the Democratic majority for the last four years, wants the Senate president job in the new Legislature. If he is reelected and is named to the post, Senator John Grason Turnbull of Baltimore County may become majority leader if he is successful in his quest for reelection.

Many delegates would like to move across the hall to the Senate. Some Senators would like to become judges or move on to some other office. Other legislators may decide to retire from the political wars.

And—as always happens—some will be retired by the voters.

Suspended Term Ruled Enough for Knockout Kiss

Vienna, March 5 (U.P.)—The Austran Supreme Court ruled, in a decision made public today, that a six-week suspended jail sentence is sufficient punishment for stealing a kiss even though it leaves the victim unconscious.

A provincial court gave a carpenter the six-week suspended sentence for kissing a girl. The girl's mother, appealing for a more severe penalty, said the passionate carpenter left the girl unconscious, with teeth marks on her right cheek.

"My daughter's personal liberty was infringed upon because her arms were held against her sides when she was forcibly kissed," the mother said.

The high court upheld the lower court's sentence.

St. Thomas Aquinas Mass

All classes at Catholic University will be suspended Tuesday in commemoration of the Feast of St. Thomas Aquinas, a patron saint of Catholic schools. Mass will be celebrated at 10:30 a. m. in the National Shrine of Immaculate Conception on the campus by the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O.P., dean of the School of Philosophy.

X-Ray Technicians to Meet

The Society of Registered X-ray Technicians will elect officers at its monthly meeting Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Medical Society Building, 1718 M st. nw. Miss Grace I. Joseph, R. T., will talk on "Ethics."

"When Mommy's little protector goes off-duty"...

"It's good to have a second telephone in the house, especially when it's so close at hand. John says he doesn't worry nearly so much about us now when he's out of town, because he knows the telephone is handy in case something should happen.

"Besides being such a comfort when John's away, it's so convenient to have telephones on both floors. Now we can make calls—and answer them, too—without extra steps or trouble. It's easy to see why we have an extension telephone in our house."

I Wonder Why

When night is gone and when the dawn . . . Is coloring the sky . . . I lie awake and think of you . . . And vaguely wonder why . . . I wonder why we never met . . . Until that certain day . . . And why there were so many things . . . We never tried to say . . . Why everything was beautiful . . . And we were so content . . . And how we knew without a word . . . Exactly what we meant . . . I wonder why I always sigh . . . Whenever you are near . . . And whether any other one . . . Could ever be so dear . . . But when I finally arise . . . To meet the morning new . . . I never wonder why my heart . . . Is so in love with you.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Member Passes Buck, Finds Himself In Soup

Peace has descended again on one of our better-known private clubs, following a period of grass roots protest after the suspension of a member.

The Board of Trustees has finally relented and restored the member to good standing. But there are those in the club who think the man shouldn't have been suspended at all. Here's the background:

After a hard evening of relaxing in the bar, the member had gone back to the kitchen to inform the chef that the cooking had been very sad of late, and that the soup was especially poor. It lacked greens.

The chef entered a vigorous denial and suggested that the member return to the more familiar confines of the tap room and leave such things as soups and greens to professionals.

"Not," snapped the irate member, "until I add a bit of green to your soup." And with that he whipped a dollar bill from his pocket, wadded it up, and slammed it in the soup kettle.

The board's suspension followed the next morning.

IT'S DANGEROUS, BUT LEGAL

This is the time of the year when snow is always a possibility. And when it comes, we often see autos whizzing along our streets with their back windows completely covered with snow.

The perpendicular rear window through which Grandpa watched the movement of traffic behind him has given way to a monstrosity which these days is almost horizontal. It's guaranteed to catch every bit of dust, rain and snow in the vicinity and, unless cleaned almost daily, do a thorough job of blotting out the driver's view.

Many motorists don't want to get their hands cold removing the snow—so they just drive along without touching it. And the strange part of the story is that there's no law against this dangerous practice.

The closest regulation I could find is Section 146 (a) which provides that no person shall drive a car with unauthorized stickers "or other non-transparent material" on the front, side or back windows of a car.

"Is snow a non-transparent material?" I asked Inspector Arthur E. Miller.

"Under those circumstances, I guess it is," replied our traffic boss. "But it seems to me that this section of the regulations clearly was meant to refer to stickers—not snow. Frankly, I don't think we have a regulation under which we could cite a motorist for driving with a back window full of snow, but I think we should have.

"A careful driver watches traffic on all sides of him, not just in front. If a sticker that blocks part of the window is a hazard, two inches of snow blocking the entire window is that much worse."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Here's another version of the "insured parcel problem."

In November of 1948, I sent my father in London several classical records. A month later, I was informed by my father that only one record had arrived intact.

I filed a claim with the Post Office Department, and a year later they sent me a check for $3.67 to pay for the damage.

My father disposed of the wrappings and broken records, and I thought the matter was settled.

But in these first few months of 1950 I have received three notices from our Post Office Department to the effect that the British Post Office says the package was delivered in perfect condition.

My question is: Who pays whom? Do I have to repay the United States Post Office? Do I try to collect from the British? Am I out $3.67? What shall I do?

William Osten,
1436 Fairmont st. nw.

Dear Bill:

You came to the right man for advice.

Nobody has ever written off Uncle Sam as a bad debt; this is your chance to make history.

Give back the $3.67 forthwith. Then deduct it from your income tax as an uncollectible debt.

This is sure to create an unprecedented crisis for the Collector of Infernal Revenue, and the ensuing correspondence will no doubt keep you amused for the next 5 years. Where else can you get that much action for $3.67?

Bill

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four 6-week-old half-Persian kittens; housebroken." (Michigan 3329.)

"Male cat, 8 months old, black with white collar and feet; docile but rather isolationist." (Temple 5288.)

"Good female dog, too frisky for apartment, wants home in country." (Republic 5239 after 8 a. m.)

"Playful, healthy black kitten with white bib and boots; we'd love to keep her but our lease says 'no.'" (Wisconsin 0885.)

"Refrigerator; old, but still working when we replaced it a month ago. Very large Frigidaire, three doors, good enamel and stainless steel." (Union 2809.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. J. E. Smedley, 217 Newcomb st. se.: I wish I could help you, but I can't. Literally hundreds of things are lost and found in Washington each day, and if I were to print one such item, I'd either have to use them all or be guilty of playing favorites. Why don't you try one of our famous classified ads? They really get results. P.S.: Thanks for the kind words about my radio program. I didn't think listeners had such long memories.

Jim Anderson, 3808 N. 6th rd., Arlington, Va.: The Reader's Digest paid $20 for that nine-word "Add Definitions" item they reprinted in the current edition. I wish I could find somebody who would buy more of my stuff at those rates. Incidentally, if I had known they were going to pick up those nine words, I'd have added "Love" at no extra charge.

OVERHEARD

Sam LeBow of 3220 Wisconsin ave. nw. reports that he overheard this gem at the Library of Congress:

"I can't understand your interest in rare books. Personally, I like books that are well done."

Killing Reveals Crime Tie-Up

By Drew Pearson

Abe Davidian, a narcotics runner, was found lying on a couch in his mother's home in Fresno, Calif., last week, a bullet hole in his head.

Pearson

Behind his murder were ramifications extending to the New Jersey Palisades, probably down to Miami, Fla., where a narcotics grand jury has been in session, and apparently up to enforcement officers in the State of California. In fact, Davidian's murder illustrates the amazing interstate network of organized crime.

I was in Fresno in January when Davidian and 15 others were indicted by the Federal Government in an effort to break up a giant narcotics ring. At that time, both Warren Olney of the California Crime Commission and George White, chief United States narcotics agent for the West Coast, were worried.

Four months ago Davidian was speeding up California's Central Valley near Bakersfield with one kilogram of heroin in his car. The police gave chase.

Shortly after his arrest, Davidian came in to see Federal Narcotics Chief George White and offered to tell the story of a large-scale narcotics ring which the Federal Government had been trying to track down for months. He was willing to buy more heroin, this time using marked money and with Federal officers and dictaphones planted within earshot.

Federal officers were elated and immediately communicated with California's State narcotics chief, Walter Creighton, who promised cooperation. But the next day White's Federal narcotics deputies in Los Angeles talked to Creighton and found him huffy and uncooperative. Mike Riordan, California assistant attorney general in charge of law enforcement in San Francisco, Creighton said, didn't want to cooperate with the United States Government. Riordan wanted to prosecute Davidian immediately.

Riordan is the assistant of Attorney General Fred Howser. So also is State Narcotics Chief Walter Creighton. Neither the Federal Government nor Governor Warren have any power over them.

By this time, Federal agents knew that the head of the narcotics ring was Joe Sica, the new Italian leader of the Los Angeles underworld and the man who has been nudging Mickey Cohen down from his gangland throne.

Despite this background and despite the pleas of United States narcotics agents, the enforcement officers of California's Attorney General Howser refused to cooperate in delaying prosecution of Davidian.

That ends Chapter 1 of the story of the California narcotics ring. Chapter 2 began about two weeks ago when the United States Attorney's office in Los Angeles got a tip that Eastern gangsters were being imported to bump off Davidian.

The FBI was notified. But Davidian was a narcotics witness for the Treasury Department. He was not a Justice Department witness and, without consulting J. Edgar Hoover, the West Coast FBI took no interest.

To protect him, Davidian was hidden in Arizona by United States narcotics agents, but last week he returned to Los Angeles for arraignment and slipped up to his mother's home in Fresno.

Joe Sica and his 15 indicted colleagues were considered the biggest narcotics haul in the history of the United States. This was the first time the Federal Government got real inside information regarding the sources of heroin now flooding the U. S. A. But with no witness alive to testify against them, the case against the Sica gang has now blown up higher than a kite.
